And you should kiss my eyelids when I lie
Cold, dead, and dumb to all the world contains,

When you're working for the U.P. Railway.
Laborers' song during the construction of the Union Pacific Railway

[1] Written while Harte was United States consul at Glasgow [1880–1885], after receiving a note of warning from Bristol, England, that an impostor pretending to be a destitute American had been procuring money from United States consuls.

The folded orbs would open at thy breath,
And, from its exile in the isles of death,
Life would come gladly back along my veins.

Creed. Stanza 1

WILLIAM WINTER
[1836–1917]

Who cares for nothing alone is free, —
Sit down, good fellow, and drink with me!

Orgia

His love was like the liberal air, —
Embracing all, to cheer and bless;
And every grief that mortals share
Found pity in his tenderness.

I. H. Bromley

Fierce for the right, he bore his part
In strife with many a valiant foe;
But Laughter winged his polished dart,
And kindness tempered every blow.

Ibid.

Cold the stars are, cold the earth is,
Everything is grim and cold!
Strange and drear the sound of mirth is — Life and I are old.

CESARE LOMBROSO
[1836–1909]

Klopstock was questioned regarding the meaning of a passage in his poem. He replied, "God and I both knew what it meant once; now God alone knows."[1]

The Man of Genius. Part I, Chap. 2

The appearance of a single great genius is more than equivalent to the birth of a hundred mediocrities.

Ibid. Part II, Chap. 2

"Lawsuit mania" . . . a continual craving to go to law against others, while considering themselves the injured party.

Ibid. Part III, Chap. 3

The ignorant man always adores what he cannot understand.

Ibid.

Men in general, but more particularly the insane, love to speak of themselves, and on this theme they even become eloquent.

The Man of Genius. Part IV, Chap. 1

MARY GARDINER BRAINARD
[1837–1905]

I see not a step before me as I tread on another year;
But I've left the Past in God's keeping, — the Future His mercy shall clear;
And what looks dark in the distance, may brighten as I draw near.

Not Knowing. Stanza 2

JOHN BURROUGHS
[1837–1921]

In sorrow he learned this truth —
One may return to the place of his birth,
He cannot go back to his youth.

The Return. Stanza 3

Serene, I fold my hands and wait,
Nor care for wind, nor tide, nor sea;
I rave no more 'gainst time or fate,
For lo! my own shall come to me.

Waiting. Stanza 1

I was born with a chronic anxiety about the weather.

Is It Going to Rain?

Literature is an investment of genius which pays dividends to all subsequent times.

Literary Fame

It is always easier to believe than to deny. Our minds are naturally affirmative.

The Light of Day. The Modern Skeptic

Time does not become sacred to us until we have lived it.

The Spell of the Past

Nature teaches more than she preaches. There are no sermons in stones. It is easier to get a spark out of a stone than a moral.

Time and Change. The Gospel of Nature

I go to books and to nature as a bee goes to the flower, for a nectar that I can make into my own honey.

The Summit of the Years

Life is a struggle, but not a warfare.

GROVER CLEVELAND

[1837–1908]

Public officers are the servants and agents of the people, to execute the laws which the people have made.

Letter accepting the nomination for Governor of New York [October, 1882]

Your every voter, as surely as your chief magistrate, exercises a public trust.[1]

Inaugural Address [March 4, 1885]

However plenty silver dollars may become, they will not be distributed as gifts among the people.

First Annual Message [December 8, 1885]

The so-called debtor class . . . are not dishonest because they are in debt.

Ibid.

After an existence of nearly twenty years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth.

Message [March 1, 1886]

When more of the people's sustenance is exacted through the form of taxation than is necessary to meet the just obligations of Government and expenses of its economical administration, such exaction becomes ruthless extortion and a violation of the fundamental principles of a free Government.

Second Annual Message [December, 1886]

It is a condition which confronts us — not a theory.[1]

Third Annual Message [December 6, 1887]

The lessons of paternalism ought to be unlearned and the better lesson taught that while the people should patriotically and cheerfully support their Government, its functions do not include the support of the people.

Inaugural Address [March 4, 1893]

I have tried so hard to do the right.

Last Words

ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY

[1837–1917]

You may fire when you are ready, Gridley.

Addressed to the Captain of Dewey's Flagship, at the Battle of Manila Bay, May 1, 1898

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS

[1837–1920]

We live, but a world has passed away
With the years that perished to make us men.

The Mulberries

Lord, for the erring thought
Not into evil wrought:
Lord, for the wicked will Betrayed and baffled still:
For the heart from itself kept,
Our thanksgiving accept.

Thanksgiving

Though I move with leaden feet,
Light itself is not so fleet;
And before you know me gone
Eternity and I are one.

Time

I know his name, I know his note,
That so with rapture takes my soul;
Like flame the gold beneath his throat,
His glossy cope is black as coal.

The Rise of Silas Lapham [1885]. Chap. 5

The man of letters must make up his mind that in the United States the fate of a book is in the hands of the women.

Literature and Life [1902]

Does it afflict you to find your books wearing out? I mean literally. . . . The mortality of all inanimate things is terrible to me, but that of books most of all.

Letter to Charles Eliot Norton [April 6, 1903]

I am not sorry for having wrought in common, crude material so much; that is the right American stuff; and perhaps hereafter, when my din is done, if any one is curious to know what that noise was, it will be found to have proceeded from a small insect which was scraping about on the surface of our life and trying to get into its meaning for the sake of the other insects larger or smaller. That is, such has been my unconscious work; consciously, I was always, as I still am, trying to fashion a piece of literature out of the life next at hand.

Letter to Charles Eliot Norton [April 26, 1903]

Last night, after I got back from my Balfour tailor, I expressed my surprise that B. should go to such a simple shop. "Well, I don't think, sir, Mr. Balfour cares much for his clothes, sir. Them distinguished men can't, sir. Their thoughts soars to 'igher things, sir."

And I only wish we'd won;
And I don't ax no pardon
For anything I've done.
A Good Old Rebel (Unreconstructed). Stanza 1

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE
[1837–1909]

Maiden and mistress of the months and stars
Now folded in the flowerless fields of heaven.
Atalanta in Calydon [1865]. Line 1

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,
The mother of months in meadow or plain
Fills the shadows and windy places
With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain;
And the brown bright nightingale amorous
Is half assuaged for Itylus,
For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces,
The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.
Ibid. Chorus, Stanza 1

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,
Maiden most perfect, lady of light,
With a noise of winds and many rivers,
With a clamour of waters, and with might;
Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet,
Over the splendour and speed of thy feet,
For the faint east quickens, the wan west shivers,
Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.
Atalanta in Calydon. Chorus, Stanza 2

For winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snows and sins;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;
And time remembered is grief forgotten.
And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the spring begins.
Ibid. Stanza 4

Before the beginning of years
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with pain for leaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance fallen from heaven,
And madness risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite;
Love that endures for a breath;
Night, the shadow of light,
And life, the shadow of death.
Ibid. Chorus, Stanza 1

Eyesight and speech they wrought
For the veils of the soul therein,
A time for labour and thought,
A time to serve and to sin;[1]
They gave him light in his ways,
And love, and a space for delight,
And beauty and length of days,
And night, and sleep in the night.
His speech is a burning fire;
With his lips he travaileth;
In his heart is a blind desire,
In his eyes foreknowledge of death;
He weaves, and is clothed with derision;
Sows, and he shall not reap;
His life is a watch or a vision
Between a sleep and a sleep.
Ibid. Stanza 3

We have seen thee, O Love, thou art fair; thou art goodly, O Love.
Ibid. Chorus

For words divide and rend;
But silence is most noble till the end.
Atalanta in Calydon. Chorus

O wise among women, and wisest,
Our Lady of Pain.
Dolores [1866]. Stanza 5

Change in a trice
The lilies and languors of virtue
For the raptures and roses of vice.
Ibid. Stanza 9

O splendid and sterile Dolores,
Our Lady of Pain.
Ibid.

Ah beautiful passionate body
That never has ached with a heart!
Ibid. Stanza 11

The delight that consumes the desire,
The desire that outruns the delight.
Ibid. Stanza 14

Despair the twin-born of devotion.
Ibid.

I have passed from the outermost portal
To the shrine where a sin is a prayer.
Ibid. Stanza 17

For the crown of our life as it closes
Is darkness, the fruit thereof dust;
No thorns go as deep as a rose's,
And love is more cruel than lust.
Time turns the old days to derision,
Our loves into corpses or wives;
And marriage and death and division
Make barren our lives.
Ibid. Stanza 20

What ailed us, O gods, to desert you
For creeds that refuse and restrain?
Come down and redeem us from virtue,
Our Lady of Pain.
Ibid. Stanza 35

Then love was the pearl of his oyster,
And Venus rose red out of wine.
Ibid. Stanza 39

Lo, this is she that was the world's delight.
Laus Veneris [1866]. Stanza 3

Ah yet would God this flesh of mine might be Where air might wash and long leaves cover me,
Where tides of grass break into foam of flowers,
Or where the wind's feet shine along the sea.
Laus Veneris. Stanza 14

O sad kissed mouth, how sorrowful it is!
Ibid. Stanza 79

To have known love, how bitter a thing it is.
Ibid. Stanza 103

There will no man do for your sake, I think,
What I would have done for the least word said.
I had wrung life dry for your lips to drink,
Broken it up for your daily bread.
The Triumph of Time [1866]. Stanza 12

I wish we were dead together today,
Lost sight of, hidden away out of sight,
Clasped and clothed in the cloven clay,
Out of the world's way, out of the light.
Ibid. Stanza 15

At the door of life, by the gate of breath,
There are worse things waiting for men than death.
Ibid. Stanza 20

I will go back to the great sweet mother,
Mother and lover of men, the sea.
Ibid. Stanza 33

There lived a singer in France of old,
By the tideless dolorous midland sea.
In a land of sand and ruin and gold
There shone one woman, and none but she.
Ibid. Stanza 41

O brother, the gods were good to you.
Sleep, and be glad while the world endures.
Be well content as the years wear through;
Give thanks for life, and the loves and lures.
Ibid. Stanza 43

I shall never be friends again with roses;
I shall loathe the sweet tunes.
Ibid. Stanza 45

Marvellous mercies and infinite love.
Les Noyades [1866]. Stanza 1

I am sick of singing; the bays burn deep and chafe: I am fain
To rest a little from praise and grievous pleasure and pain.
Hymn to Proserpine: After the Proclamation in Rome of the Christian Faith [1866]

Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean; the world has grown grey from thy breath;
We have drunken of things Lethean, and fed on the fullness of death.
Laurel is green for a season, and love is sweet for a day;
But love grows bitter with treason, and laurel outlives not May.
Sleep, shall we sleep after all? for the world is not sweet in the end;
For the old faiths loosen and fall, the new years ruin and rend.
Ibid.

I shall die as my fathers died, and sleep as they sleep; even so.
For the glass of the years is brittle wherein we gaze for a span.
Ibid.

For there is no God found stronger than death; and death is a sleep.
Ibid.

If you loved me ever so little,
I could bear the bonds that gall,
I could dream the bonds were brittle;
You do not love me at all.
Satia Te Sanguine [1866]. Stanza 1

While he lives let a man be glad,
For none hath joy of his death.
A Lamentation [1866]. I, 4

If love were what the rose is,
And I were like the leaf,
Our lives would grow together
In sad or singing weather.
A Match [1866]. Stanza 1

If you were April's lady,
And I were lord in May.
Ibid. Stanza 5

If you were queen of pleasure,
And I were king of pain,
We'd hunt down love together,
Pluck out his flying feather,
And teach his feet a measure,
And find his mouth a rein.
Ibid. Stanza 6

For in the time we know not of
Did fate begin
Weaving the web of days that wove
Your doom, Faustine.
Faustine [1866]. Stanza 24

A love machine
With clockwork joints of supple gold —
No more, Faustine.
Ibid. Stanza 36

Take hand and part with laughter;
Touch lips and part with tears;
Once more and no more after,
Whatever comes with years.
Rococo [1866]. Stanza 1

Forget that I remember,
And dream that I forget.
Ibid. Stanza 2

The burden of long living. Thou shalt fear
Waking, and sleeping mourn upon thy bed;
And say at night "Would God the day were here,"
And say at dawn "Would God the day were dead."[1]
A Ballad of Burdens [1866]. Stanza 4

For life is sweet, but after life is death.
This is the end of every man's desire.
Ibid. L'Envoy

O love, O lover, loose or hold me fast,
I had thee first, whoever have thee last.
Erotion [1866]

I shall remember while the light lives yet
And in the night-time I shall not forget.
Though (as thou wilt) thou leave me ere life leave,
I will not, for thy love I will not, grieve.
Ibid.

Here, where the world is quiet;
Here, where all trouble seems
Dead winds' and spent waves' riot
In doubtful dreams of dreams.
The Garden of Proserpine [1866]. Stanza 1

---

[1] In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see. — Deuteronomy, XXVIII, 67

I am tired of tears and laughter,
  And men that laugh and weep;
Of what may come hereafter
  For men that sow and reap:
I am weary of days and hours,
Blown buds of barren flowers,
Desires and dreams and powers
  And everything but sleep.

The Garden of Proserpine. Stanza 2

We are not sure of sorrow,
  And joy was never sure.
Today will die tomorrow;
  Time stoops to no man's lure;
And love, grown faint and fretful,
With lips but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
  Weeps that no loves endure.

Ibid. Stanza 10

From too much love of living,
  From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
  Whatever gods may be
That no life lives forever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
  Winds somewhere safe to sea.[1]

Ibid. Stanza 11

Ah that such sweet things should be fleet,
Such fleet things sweet!

Félise [1866]. Stanza 22

Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
The bluest of things grey.

Ibid. Stanza 24

Eyes colored like a water-flower,
And deeper than the green sea's glass;
Eyes that remember one sweet hour —
In vain we swore it should not pass.

Ibid. Stanza 36

Live and let live, as I will do,
Love and let love, and so will I.
But, sweet, for me no more with you:
Not while I live, not though I die.
    Good-night, good-bye.

Ibid. Stanza 59

I remember the way we parted,
  The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted
  And knew we should both forget.

An Interlude [1866]. Stanza 11

And the best and the worst of this is
  That neither is most to blame,
If you have forgotten my kisses
  And I have forgotten your name.

Ibid. Stanza 14

And through the trumpet of a child of Rome
Rang the pure music of the flutes of Greece.

Song for the Centenary of Walter Savage Landor [1866]. Stanza 17

I am that which began;
  Out of me the years roll;
Out of me God and man;
  I am equal and whole;
God changes, and man, and the form of them bodily; I am the soul.

Hertha [1871]. Stanza 1

Before ever land was,
  Before ever the sea,
Or soft hair of the grass,
  Or fair limbs of the tree,
Or the flesh-coloured fruit of my branches,
  I was, and thy soul was in me.

Ibid. Stanza 2

A creed is a rod,
  And a crown is of night;
But this thing is God,
  To be man with thy might,
To grow straight in the strength of thy spirit, and to live out thy life as the light.

Ibid. Stanza 15

In the grey beginning of years, in the twilight of things that began,
The word of the earth in the ears of the world, was it God? was it man?

Hymn of Man [1871]

Ask nothing more of me, sweet,
All I can give you I give;
Heart of my heart, were it more,
More would be laid at your feet:
Love that should help you to live,
Song that should spur you to soar.

The Oblation [1871]. Stanza 1

It is long since Mr. Carlyle expressed his opinion that if any poet or other literary creature could really be "killed off by one critique" or many, the sooner he was so despatched the better; a sentiment in which I for one humbly but heartily concur.

There is no help for these things; none to mend,
And none to mar; not all our songs, O friend,
Will make death clear or make life durable.

Ave atque Vale: In Memory of Charles Baudelaire [1878]. Stanza 16

Sleep; and if life was bitter to thee, pardon,
If sweet, give thanks; thou hast no more to live;
And to give thanks is good, and to forgive.

Ibid. Stanza 17

Body and spirit are twins: God only knows which is which.

The Higher Pantheism in a Nutshell [1880]. Stanza 7

Those who seek education in the paths of duty are always deceived by the illusion that power in the hands of friends is an advantage to them.[1]

Ibid.

Power is poison. Its effect on Presidents had been always tragic, chiefly as an almost insane excitement at first, and a worse reaction afterwards; but also because no mind is so well balanced as to bear the strain of seizing unlimited force without habit or knowledge of it; and finding it disputed with him by hungry packs of wolves and hounds whose lives depend on snatching the carrion.

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Life is eternal; and love is immortal; and death is only a horizon; and a horizon is nothing save the limit of our sight.

WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER
[1840–1910]

The Forgotten Man[2] . . . delving away in patient industry, supporting his family, paying his taxes, casting his vote, supporting the church and the school . . . but he is the only one for whom there is no provision in the great scramble and the big divide. Such is the Forgotten Man. He works, he votes, generally he prays — but his chief business in life is to pay. . . . Who and where is the Forgotten Man in this case, who will have to pay for it all?

However divinity schools may refuse to "skip" in unison, and may butt and butter each other about the doctrine and origin of human depravity, all will join devoutly in the credo, I believe in the total depravity of inanimate things.

The Total Depravity of Inanimate Things [1864]

The elusiveness of soap, the knottiness of strings, the transitory nature of buttons, the inclination of suspenders to twist and of hooks to forsake their lawful eyes, and cleave only unto the hairs of their hapless owner's head.

The clever so rude to the good!

JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, JR.
[1841–1935]

The life of the law has not been logic: it has been experience.

The Common Law [1881]

I think that, as life is action and passion, it is required of a man that he should share the passion and action of his time at peril of being judged not to have lived.

Memorial Day Address [1884]

Through our great good fortune, in our youth our hearts were touched with fire.

Ibid.

The Law, wherein, as in a magic mirror, we see reflected not only our own lives, but the lives of all men that have been! When I think on this majestic theme, my eyes dazzle.[1]

To the Suffolk Bar Association [1885]

[1] A London bookseller, friend of Austin Dobson.

[1] See John Webster, page 226a.

I say to you in all sadness of conviction, that to think great thoughts you must be heroes as well as idealists.

The Profession of the Law [1886]

Thus only can you gain the secret isolated joy of the thinker, who knows that, a hundred years after he is dead and forgotten, men who never heard of him will be moving to the measure of his thought, — the subtile rapture of a postponed power, which the world knows not because it has no external trappings, but which to his prophetic vision is more real than that which commands an army.

Ibid.

The prophecies of what the courts will do in fact, and nothing more pretentious, are what I mean by the law.

The Path of the Law [1897]

Certainty generally is illusion, and repose is not the destiny of man.

Ibid.

The remoter and more general aspects of the law are those which give it universal interest. It is through them that you not only become a great master in your calling, but connect your subject with the universe and catch an echo of the infinite, a glimpse of its unfathomable process, a hint of the universal law.

Ibid.

The rule of joy and the law of duty seem to me all one.

Speech at Bar Association Dinner, Boston [1900]

Life is an end in itself, and the only question as to whether it is worth living is whether you have enough of it.

Ibid.

A great man represents a great ganglion in the nerves of society, or, to vary the figure, a strategic point in the campaign of history, and part of his greatness consists in his being there.

John Marshall [1901]

Taxes are what we pay for civilized society.

Compañia de Tabacos v. Collector, 275 U. S. 87, 100 [1904]

Great cases like hard cases make bad law.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 400 [1904]

The Fourteenth Amendment does not enact Mr. Herbert Spencer's Social Statics.

Lochner v. New York, 198 U. S. 45, 75 [1905]

General propositions do not decide concrete cases. The decision will depend on a judgment or intuition more subtle than any articulate major premise.

The Class of '61 [Speeches, 1913]

I learned in the regiment and in the class the conclusion, at least, of what I think the best service that we can do for our country and for ourselves: To see so far as one may, and to feel the great forces that are behind every detail . . . ; to hammer out as compact and solid a piece of work as one can, to try to make it first rate, and to leave it unadvertised.

Ibid.

The only prize much cared for by the powerful is power. The prize of the general is not a bigger tent, but command.

Law and the Court [1913]

Judges are apt to be naif, simple-minded men, and they need something of Mephistopheles. We too need education in the obvious — to learn to transcend our own convictions and to leave room for much that we hold dear to be done away with short of revolution by the orderly change of law.

Ibid.

I recognize without hesitation that judges do and must legislate, but they can do so only interstitially; they are confined from molar to molecular motions.

Southern Pacific Co. v. Jensen, 244 U. S. 205, 221 [1917]

The common law is not a brooding omnipresence in the sky but the articulate voice of some sovereign or quasi-sovereign that can be identified.

Southern Pacific Co. v. Jensen, 244 U. S. 205, 221. Page 222

Natural Law [1918]

When men have realized that time has upset many fighting faiths, they may come to believe even more than they believe the very foundations of their own conduct that the ultimate good desired is better reached by free trade in ideas — that the best test of truth is the power of the thought to get itself accepted in the competition of the market, and that truth is the only ground upon which their wishes safely can be carried out. That at any rate is the theory of our Constitution. It is an experiment, as all life is an experiment.

Abrams v. United States, 250 U. S. 616, 630 [1919]

Upon this point a page of history is worth a volume of logic.

New York Trust Co. v. Eisner, 256 U. S. 345, 349 [1921]

It is said that this manifesto is more than a theory, that it was an incitement. Every idea is an incitement.

Gitlow v. New York, 268 U. S. 652, 673 [1925]

Three generations of imbeciles are enough.

Buck v. Bell, 274 U. S. 200, 207 [1927]

For my part I think it a less evil that some criminals should escape than that the government should play an ignoble part. . . . If the existing code does not permit district attorneys to have a hand in such dirty business, it does not permit the judge to allow such iniquities to succeed.

Olmstead v. United States, 277 U. S. 438, 470 [1928]

If there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other it is the principle of free thought — not free thought for those who agree with us but freedom for the thought that we hate.

United States v. Schwimmer, 279 U. S. 644, 653 [1928]

The riders in a race do not stop short when they reach the goal. There is a little finishing canter before coming to a standstill. There is time to hear the kind voice of friends and to say to one's self: "The work is done." But just as one says that, the answer comes: "The race is over, but the work never is done while the power to work remains." The canter that brings you to a standstill need not be only coming to rest. It cannot be, while you still live. For to live is to function. That is all there is in living.

Radio address on his ninetieth birthday [March 8, 1931]

Life seems to me like a Japanese picture which our imagination does not allow to end with the margin. We aim at the infinite and when our arrow falls to earth it is in flames.

You cannot fly like an eagle with the wings of a wren.

Afoot in England [1909]. Chap. 6

When I hear people say they have not found the world and life so agreeable or interesting as to be in love with it, or that they look with equanimity to its end, I am apt to think they have never been properly alive nor seen with clear vision the world they think so meanly of, or anything in it — not a blade of grass. Only I know that mine is an exceptional case, that the visible world is to me more beautiful and interesting than to most persons, that the delight I experienced in my communings with Nature did not pass away, leaving nothing but a recollection of vanished happiness to intensify a present pain. The happiness was never lost, . . . so that in my worst times, when I was compelled to exist shut out from Nature in London for long periods, sick and poor and friendless, I could yet always feel that it was infinitely better to be than not to be.

Sherman's introduction to The Poetical Works of Joaquin Miller [1923], Miller explains the origin of his pen name. His first writing was a public letter in defense of Joaquin Murietta, the outlaw. A Sacramento newspaper banteringly identified him with the outlaw, and friends continued the banter. The name "Joaquin" clung to him, so Miller accepted it and used it in the title of his first book and thereafter.

Keep the faculty of effort alive in you by a little gratuitous exercise every day. That is, be systematically ascetic or heroic in little unnecessary points, do every day or two something for no other reason than that you would rather not do it, so that when the hour of dire need draws nigh, it may find you not unnerved and untrained to stand the test.

As Egypt's pearl dissolved in rosy wine,
And Cleopatra night drinks all.

Evening Song. Stanza 2

My soul is sailing through the sea,
But the Past is heavy and hindereth me.

Barnacles [1877]. Stanza 1

DAVID LAW PROUDFIT ("PELEG ARKWRIGHT")

[1842–1897]

A man sat on a rock and sought
Refreshment from his thumb;
A dinotherium wandered by
And scared him some.
His name was Smith. The kind of rock
He sat upon was shale.
One feature quite distinguished him —
He had a tail.

Prehistoric Smith

Nature abhors imperfect work
And on it lays her ban;.
And all creation must despise
A tailless man.

Strange we never prize the music
Till the sweet-voiced bird has flown,
Strange that we should slight the violets
Till the lovely flowers are gone.

If We Knew [1867]

HUGH ANTOINE D'ARCY

[1843–1925]

"Say, boys! if you give me just another whiskey I'll be glad,
And I'll draw right here a picture of the face that drove me mad.
Give me that piece of chalk with which you mark the baseball score,
You shall see the lovely Madeleine upon the bar-room floor."

The Face upon the Floor [1887] [1]

With chalk in hand the vagabond began
To sketch a face that well might buy the soul of any man.
Then as he placed another lock upon the shapely head,
With a fearful shriek he leaped and fell across the picture — dead!

ANNA E. HAMILTON

[1843–1876]

This learned I from the shadow of a tree,
That to and fro did sway against a wall,
Our shadow selves, our influence, may fall
Where we ourselves can never be.

Influence

HENRY JAMES

[1843–1916]

The face of nature and civilization in this our country is to a certain point a very sufficient literary field. But it will yield its secrets only to a really grasping imagination. . . . To write well and worthily of American things one need even more than elsewhere to be a master.

Letter to Charles Eliot Norton [January 16, 1871]

It's a complex fate, being an American, and one of the responsibilities it entails is fighting against a superstitious valuation of Europe.

[1] Often given as "The Face on the Barroom Floor."

Letter [1872]. Quoted in PERCY LUBBOCK, Letters of Henry James [1920], Vol. I, Page 13

If the picturesque were banished from the face of the earth, I think the idea would survive in some typical American breast.

Transatlantic Sketches [1875]

It takes a great deal of history to produce a little literature.

Hawthorne [1879]. Chap. 1

Whatever question there may be of his [Thoreau's] talent, there can be none, I think, of his genius. It was a slim and crooked one, but it was eminently personal. He was unperfect, unfinished, inartistic; he was worse than provincial — he was parochial.

Ibid. Chap. 4

Cats and monkeys, monkeys and cats — all human life is there.

The Madonna of the Future [1879]

There are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea.

The Portrait of a Lady [1881]

At moments she discovered she was grotesquely wrong, and then she treated herself to a week of passionate humility.

Ibid.

The real offence, as she ultimately perceived, was her having a mind of her own at all. Her mind was to be his — attached to his own like a small garden-plot to a deer-park.

Ibid.

The only reason for the existence of a novel is that it does attempt to represent life.

The Art of Fiction [1888]

The only obligation to which in advance we may hold a novel, without incurring the accusation of being arbitrary, is that it be interesting.

Ibid.

The advantage, the luxury, as well as the torment and responsibility of the novelist, is that there is no limit to what he may attempt as an executant — no limit to his possible experiments, efforts, discoveries, successes.

The Art of Fiction

The power to guess the unseen from the seen, to trace the implications of things, to judge the whole piece by the pattern, the condition of feeling life in general so completely that you are well on your way to knowing any particular corner of it — this cluster of gifts may almost be said to constitute experience. . . . If experience consists of impressions, it may be said that impressions are experience. . . . Therefore, if I should certainly say to a novice, "Write from experience and experience only," I should feel that this was rather a tantalizing monition if I were not careful immediately to add, "Try to be one of the people on whom nothing is lost."

Ibid.

We must grant the artist his subject, his idea, his donnée: our criticism is applied only to what he makes of it. . . . If we pretend to respect the artist at all, we must allow him his freedom of choice, in the face, in particular cases, of innumerable presumptions that the choice will not fructify. Art derives a considerable part of its beneficial exercise from flying in the face of presumptions.

Ibid.

There are few things more exciting to me . . . than a psychological reason.

Ibid.

The practice of "reviewing" . . . in general has nothing in common with the art of criticism.

Criticism [1893]

The critical sense is so far from frequent that it is absolutely rare, and the possession of the cluster of qualities that minister to it is one of the highest distinctions. . . . In this light one sees the critic as the real helper of the artist, a torch-bearing outrider, the interpreter, the brother. . . . Just in proportion as he is sentient and restless, just in proportion as he reacts and reciprocates and penetrates, is the critic a valuable instrument.

Criticism

However incumbent it may be on most of us to do our duty, there is, in spite of a thousand narrow dogmatisms, nothing in the world that any one is under the least obligation to like — not even (one braces one's self to risk the declaration) a particular kind of writing.

Flaubert [1893]

The time-honored bread-sauce of the happy ending.

Theatricals: Second Series [1895]

"Live all you can; it's a mistake not to. It doesn't so much matter what you do in particular, so long as you have had your life. If you haven't had that what have you had? . . . What one loses one loses; make no mistake about that. . . . The right time is any time that one is still so lucky as to have. . . . Live!"

The Ambassadors [1903]. Book Fifth, Chap. 2

Really, universally, relations stop nowhere, and the exquisite problem of the artist is eternally but to draw, by a geometry of his own, the circle within which they shall happily appear to do so.

Prefaces [1907–1909]. Roderick Hudson

There is, I think, no more nutritive or suggestive truth . . . than that of the perfect dependence of the "moral" sense of a work of art on the amount of felt life concerned in producing it. The question comes back thus, obviously, to the kind and the degree of the artist's prime sensibility, which is the soil out of which his subject springs.

Ibid. The Portrait of a Lady

To see deep difficulty braved is at any time, for the really addicted artist, to feel almost even as a pang the beautiful incentive, and to feel it verily in such sort as to wish the danger intensified. The difficulty most worth tackling can only be for him, in these conditions, the greatest the case permits of.

Prefaces. The Portrait of a Lady

Life being all inclusion and confusion, and art being all discrimination and selection, the latter, in search of the hard latent value with which it alone is concerned, sniffs round the mass as instinctively and unerringly as a dog suspicious of some buried bone.

Ibid. The Spoils of Poynton

The fatal futility of Fact.

Ibid.

No themes are so human as those that reflect for us, out of the confusion of life, the close connexion of bliss and bale, of the things that help with the things that hurt, so dangling before us for ever that bright hard medal, of so strange an alloy, one face of which is somebody's right and ease and the other somebody's pain and wrong.

Ibid. What Maisie Knew

The effort really to see and really to represent is no idle business in face of the constant force that makes for muddlement. The great thing is indeed that the muddled state too is one of the very sharpest of the realities, that it also has colour and form and character, has often in fact a broad and rich comicality.

Ibid.

To criticise is to appreciate, to appropriate, to take intellectual possession, to establish in fine a relation with the criticised thing and to make it one's own.

Ibid.

The historian, essentially, wants more documents than he can really use; the dramatist only wants more liberties than he can really take.

Ibid. The Aspern Papers

The ever-importunate murmur, "Dramatise it, dramatise it!"

Ibid. The Altar of the Dead

In art economy is always beauty.

Ibid.

The terrible fluidity of self-revelation.

Ibid. The Ambassadors

The anomalous fact is that the theatre, so called, can flourish in barbarism, but that any drama worth speaking of can develop but in the air of civilization.

Letter to C. E. Wheeler [April 9, 1911]

I'm glad you like adverbs — I adore them; they are the only qualifications I really much respect.

Letter to Miss M. Betham Edwards [January 5, 1912]

We must know, as much as possible, in our beautiful art, . . . what we are talking about — and the only way to know is to have lived and loved and cursed and floundered and enjoyed and suffered. I think I don't regret a single "excess" of my responsive youth — I only regret, in my chilled age, certain occasions and possibilities I didn't embrace.

Letter to Hugh Walpole [August 21, 1913]

I still, in presence of life . . . have reactions — as many as possible. . . . It's, I suppose, because I am that queer monster, the artist, an obstinate finality, an inexhaustible sensibility. Hence the reactions — appearances, memories, many things, go on playing upon it with consequences that I note and "enjoy" (grim word!) noting. It all takes doing — and I do. I believe I shall do yet again — it is still an act of life.

Letter to Henry Adams [March 21, 1914]

The effect, if not the prime office, of criticism is to make our absorption and our enjoyment of the things that feed the mind as aware of itself as possible, since that awareness quickens the mental demand, which thus in turn wanders further and further for pasture. This action on the part of the mind practically amounts to a reaching out for the reasons of its interest, as only by its ascertaining them can the interest grow more various. This is the very education of our imaginative life.

The New Novel [1914]

It is art that makes life, makes interest, makes importance, for our consideration and application of these things, and I know of no substitute whatever for the force and beauty of its process.

Letter to H. G. Wells [July 10, 1915]

The full, the monstrous demonstration that Tennyson was not Tennysonian.

The Middle Years [1917]. Chap. 6

To take what there is, and use it, without waiting forever in vain for the preconceived — to dig deep into the actual and get something out of that — this doubtless is the right way to live.

Notebooks [1948]

FREDERIC WILLIAM HENRY MYERS

[1843–1901]

Look when the clouds are blowing
And all the winds are free:
In fury of their going
They fall upon the sea.
But though the blast is frantic,
And though the tempest raves,
The deep immense Atlantic
Is still beneath the waves.

Wind, Moon, and Tides

Coldly sublime, intolerably just.

GEORGE BIRDSEYE
[1844–1919]

The longest day is in June, they say;
The shortest in December.
They did not come to me that way:
The shortest I remember
You came a day with me to stay,
And filled my heart with laughter;
The longest day — you were away —
The very next day after.

Rich hues have marriage made
With sweet unmemoried scents.
I Have Loved Flowers That Fade. Stanza 1

Ah! little at best can all our hopes avail us
To lift this sorrow, or cheer us, when in the dark,
Unwilling, alone we embark,
And the things we have seen and have known and have heard of, fail us.
On a Dead Child. Stanza 7

Gird on thy sword, O man, thy strength endue,
In fair desire thine earth-born joy renew.
Live thou thy life beneath the making sun
Till Beauty, Truth, and Love in thee are one.
A Hymn of Nature. VII, Stanza 1

When first we met we did not guess
That Love would prove so hard a master.
Of more than common friendliness
When first we met we did not guess.
Triolet

So sweet love seemed that April morn,
When first we kissed beside the thorn,
So strangely sweet, it was not strange
We thought that love could never change.
Shorter Poems. Book V, 5

My delight and thy delight
Walking, like two angels white,
In the gardens of the night.
New Poems. Number 9

Love, from whom the world begun,
Hath the secret of the sun.
Love can tell, and love alone,
Whence the million stars were strewn,
Why each atom knows its own.

He Knows It All. Stanza 1

There are two days in the week about which and upon which I never worry. Two carefree days, kept sacredly free from fear and apprehension. One of these days is Yesterday. . . . And the other day I do not worry about is Tomorrow.

The Golden Day

It isn't the experience of today that drives men mad. It is the remorse for something that happened yesterday, and the dread of what tomorrow may disclose.

How to the summer fields
Come flowers? How yields
Darkness to happy morn? How doth the night
Bring stars?

How to the Singer Comes the Song? Stanza 4

What is a sonnet? 'Tis a pearly shell
That murmurs of the far-off murmuring sea;
A precious jewel carved most curiously;
It is a little picture painted well.

[1844–1889]

The world is charged with the grandeur of God. . . .
There lives the dearest freshness deep down things.
God's Grandeur [2]

Glory be to God for dappled things —
For skies of couple-colour as a brindled cow;
For rose-moles all in stipple upon trout that swim.
Pied Beauty

All things counter, original, spare, strange;
Whatever is fickle, freckled (who knows how?)
With swift, slow; sweet, sour; adazzle, dim;

To the Gentle Reader. Stanza 5

Here stand my books, line upon line
They reach the roof, and row by row,
They speak of faded tastes of mine,
And things I did, but do not, know.

Ballade of His Books. Stanza 1

Why, why are rhymes so rare to love?

Ballade of Difficult Rhymes

There's a joy without canker or cark,
There's a pleasure eternally new,
'Tis to gloat on the glaze and the mark
Of china that's ancient and blue.

Ballade of Blue China. Stanza 1

Here's a pot with a cot in a park,
In a park where the peach-blossoms blew;
Where the lovers eloped in the dark,
Lived, died, and were changed into two Bright birds that eternally flew Through the boughs of the may, as they sang;
'Tis a tale was undoubtedly true
In the reign of the Emperor Hwang.

Ibid. Stanza 3

So gladly, from the songs of modern

In Kentucky.

In Kentucky. Stanza 1

Songbirds are sweetest, in Kentucky,
Thoroughbreds the fleetest, in Kentucky;
The mountains tower proudest,
Thunder peals the loudest,
The landscape is the grandest,
And politics the damnedest,
In Kentucky.

A harbor, even if it is a little harbor, is a good thing, since adventurers come into it as well as go out, and the life in it grows strong, because it takes something from the world and has something to give in return.
Country By-Ways. River Driftwood

We were standing where there was a fine view of the harbor and its long stretches of shore all covered by the great army of the pointed firs, darkly cloaked and standing as if they waited to embark. As we looked far seaward among the outer islands, the trees seemed to march seaward still, going steadily over the heights and down to the water's edge.

Though a little one, the master-word [Work] looms large in meaning. It is the open sesame to every portal, the great equalizer in the world, the true philosopher's stone which transmutes all the base metal of humanity into gold.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 22

Things cannot always go your way. Learn to accept in silence the minor aggravations, cultivate the gift of taciturnity and consume your own smoke [3] with an extra draught of hard work, so that those about you may not be annoyed with the dust and soot of your complaints.

Ibid.

Take the sum of human achievement in action, in science, in art, in literature — subtract the work of the men above forty, and while we should miss great treasures, even priceless treasures, we would practically be where we are to-day. . . . The effective, moving, vitalizing work of the world is done between the ages of twenty-five and forty.[1]

My second fixed idea is the uselessness of men above sixty years of age, and the incalculable benefit it would be in commercial, political, and in professional life, if as a matter of course, men stopped work at this age.[2]

Ibid.

In that charming novel, "The Fixed Period," [by] Anthony Trollope, . . . the plot hinges upon the admirable scheme of a college into which at sixty men retired for a year of contemplation before a peaceful departure by chloroform. That incalculable benefits might follow such a scheme is apparent to anyone who, like myself, is nearing the limit, and who has made a careful study of the calamities which may befall men during the seventh and eighth decades.[2]

Ibid.

Nothing will sustain you more potently than the power to recognize in your humdrum routine, as perhaps it may be thought, the true poetry of life — the poetry of the commonplace, of the ordinary man, of the plain, toil-worn woman, with their loves and their joys, their sorrows and their griefs.

Lift up one hand to heaven and thank your stars if they have given you the proper sense to enable you to appreciate the inconceivably droll situations in which we catch our fellow creatures.

[1] Address at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, February 22, 1905.

[2] This valedictory address caused much discussion and misquotation. It was headlined in the press "OSLER RECOMMENDS CHLOROFORM AT SIXTY," and occasioned many columns of letters, caustic cartoons, and the like, until to "Oslerize" became a byword.

I have three personal ideals. One, to do the day's work well and not to bother about to-morrow. . . . The second ideal has been to act the Golden Rule, as far as in me lay, toward my professional brethren and toward the patients committed to my care. And the third has been to cultivate such a measure of equanimity as would enable me to bear success with humility, the affection of my friends without pride, and to be ready when the day of sorrow and grief came to meet it with the courage befitting a man.

Life of Sir William Osler. Vol. I, Chap. 24 (Farewell Dinner [May 2, 1905])

Throw all the beer and spirits into the Irish Channel, the English Channel, and the North Sea for a year, and people in England would be infinitely better. It would certainly solve all the problems with which the philanthropists, the physicians, and the politicians have to deal.[1]

Ibid. Vol. II, Chap. 26

No man is really happy or safe without a hobby, and it makes precious little difference what the outside interest may be — botany, beetles or butterflies, roses, tulips or irises; fishing, mountaineering or antiquities — anything will do so long as he straddles a hobby and rides it hard.[2]

Ibid. Chap. 29

The little toy dog is covered with dust,
But sturdy and stanch he stands;
And the little toy soldier is red with rust,
And his musket moulds in his hands;
Time was when the little toy dog was new,
And the soldier was passing fair;
And that was the time when our Little Boy Blue Kissed them and put them there.

An' leaves me lyin' all alone an' seein' things at night.
Seein' Things. Stanza 1

Strive not to hew your path through life — it really doesn't pay;
Be sure the salve of flattery soaps all you do and say;
Herein the only royal road to fame and fortune lies:
Put not your trust in vinegar — molasses catches flies!

HENRY CABOT LODGE
[1850–1924]

New England has a harsh climate, a barren soil, a rough and stormy coast, and yet we love it, even with a love passing that of dwellers in more favored regions.

Address, New England Society of New York [December 22, 1884]

Of "Americanism" of the right sort we cannot have too much. Mere vaporing and boasting become a nation as little as a man. But honest, outspoken pride and faith in our country are infinitely better and more to be respected than the cultivated reserve which sets it down as ill-bred and in bad taste ever to refer to our country except by way of deprecation, criticism, or general negation.

Ibid.

Let every man honor and love the land of his birth and the race from which he springs and keep their memory green. It is a pious and honorable duty. But let us have done with British-Americans and Irish-Americans and German-Americans, and so on, and all be Americans. . . . If a man is going to be an American at all let him be so without any qualifying adjectives; and if he is going to be something else, let him drop the word American from his personal description.[1]

Ibid. Lay Morals

To be honest, to be kind — to earn a little and spend a little less, to make upon the whole a family happier for his presence, to renounce when that shall be necessary and not to be embittered, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation — above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends with himself — here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

[1] Of the several traditions relating to the origin of this remark, the most reasonable one traces it to John Motley Morehead [1796–1866], who was Governor of North Carolina 1841–1845. He was visited by James H. Hammond [1807–1864], who was Governor of South Carolina 1842–1844. They engaged in discussion and argument, and when the latter waxed hot, Governor Morehead was reported by a servant to have exclaimed: "It's a long time between drinks." — Personal letter from John Motley Morehead, November 21, 1934

HENRY VAN DYKE
[1852–1933]

If all the skies were sunshine,
Our faces would be fain
To feel once more upon them
The cooling plash of rain.

If All the Skies. Stanza 1

Men have dulled their eyes with sin,
And dimmed the light of heaven with doubt,
And built their temple-walls to shut thee in,
And framed their iron creeds to shut thee out.

God of the Open Air. Stanza 3

Dwarfed and abased below them.
WHITTIER: Among the Hills [1869], Prelude

Bring me men to match my mountains. — SAM WALTER FOSS [1858–1911]: The Coming American

"Raise the stone, and thou shalt find me; cleave the wood and there am I."[1]

The Toiling of Felix. Part I, Prelude

This is the gospel of labour, ring it, ye bells of the kirk!
The Lord of Love came down from above, to live with the men who work;
This is the rose that He planted, here in the thorn-curst soil:
Heaven is blest with perfect rest, but the blessing of Earth is toil.

Ibid. Envoy, Stanza 5

So it's home again, and home again,
America for me.
My heart is turning home again, and there I long to be.

"America for Me." Stanza 2

Oh, London is a man's town, there's power in the air;
And Paris is a woman's town, with flowers in her hair.

Ibid. Stanza 3

I want a ship that's westward bound to plough the rolling sea,
To the blessèd Land of Room Enough
beyond the ocean bars,
Where the air is full of sunlight and the flag is full of stars.

Ibid. Stanza 6

This is my work; my blessing, not my doom;
Of all who live, I am the one by whom
This work can best be done in the right way.

The Three Best Things. I, Work

Not to the swift, the race:
Not to the strong, the fight:[2]
Not to the righteous, perfect grace:
Not to the wise, the light.

Reliance. Stanza 1

Oh, was I born too soon, my dear, or were you born too late,
That I am going out the door while you come in the gate?

Rencontre. Stanza 1

The lintel low enough to keep out pomp and pride:
The threshold high enough to turn deceit aside.

For the Friends at Hurstmont. The Door

Self is the only prison that can ever bind the soul.

The Prison and the Angel

Individuality is the salt of common life. You may have to live in a crowd, but you do not have to live like it, nor subsist on its food.

The pledge was officially emended to read "one nation under God" by a joint resolution of Congress approved by the President, June 14, 1954.

ELBERT HUBBARD
[1856–1915]

It is not book learning young men need, nor instruction about this and that, but a stiffening of the vertebrae which will cause them to be loyal to a trust, to act promptly, concentrate their energies, do a thing — "carry a message to Garcia."[1]

A Message to Garcia [1900]

The man who is anybody and who does anything is surely going to be criticized, vilified, and misunderstood. This is a part of the penalty for greatness, and every great man understands it; and understands, too, that it is no proof of greatness. The final proof of greatness lies in being able to endure contumely without resentment.

A Little Brother of the Rich. Stanza 5

Within my earthly temple there's a crowd.
There's one of us that's humble; one that's proud.
There's one that's broken-hearted for his sins,

The Rejected Statement. Part 1

The Jews generally give value. They make you pay; but they deliver the goods. In my experience the men who want something for nothing are invariably Christians.

Saint Joan [1924]. Scene IV

One man that has a mind and knows it, can always beat ten men who haven't and don't.

The Apple Cart [1930]. Act I

Every person who owes his life to civilized society and who has enjoyed since his childhood its very costly protections and advantages should appear at reasonable intervals before a properly qualified jury to justify his existence, which should be summarily and painlessly terminated if he fails to justify it and it develops that he is a positive nuisance and more trouble than he is worth. Nothing less will really make people responsible citizens.

[1856–1924]

The United States must be neutral in fact as well as in name. . . . We must be impartial in thought as well as in action.

Message to the U. S. Senate [August 19, 1914]

You deal in the raw material of opinion, and, if my convictions have any validity, opinion ultimately governs the world.

Address to the Associated Press [April 20, 1915]

There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight.

Address to Foreign-Born Citizens [May 10, 1915]

The things that the flag stands for were created by the experiences of a great people. Everything that it stands for was written by their lives. The flag is the embodiment, not of sentiment, but of history. It represents the experiences made by men and women, the experiences of those who do and live under that flag.

Address [June 14, 1915]

We have stood apart, studiously neutral.

Message to Congress [December 7, 1915]

There must be, not a balance of power, but a community of power; not organized rivalries, but an organized common peace.

Address to the U. S. Senate [January 22, 1917]

It must be a peace without victory. . . . Victory would mean peace forced upon the loser, a victor's terms imposed upon the vanquished. It would be accepted in humiliation, under duress, at an intolerable sacrifice, and would leave a sting, a resentment, a bitter memory upon which terms of peace would rest, not permanently, but only as upon quicksand. Only a peace between equals can last.

Address to Congress, asking for a declaration of war [April 2, 1917]

The world must be made safe for democracy.

Ibid.

It is a fearful thing to lead this great peaceful people into war . . . we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts, — for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own Governments, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free. To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other.

Address to Congress, asking for a declaration of war [April 2, 1917]

1. Open covenants of peace, openly arrived at.

2. Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas.

5. A free, open-minded, and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims.

8. The wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine . . . should be righted.

10. The peoples of Austria-Hungary . . . should be accorded the freest opportunity of autonomous development.

13. An independent Polish state should be erected . . . which should be assured a free and secure access to the sea.

14. A general association of nations must be formed . . . for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike.

Address to Congress (The Fourteen Points) [January 8, 1918]

Sometimes people call me an idealist. Well, that is the way I know I am an American. America is the only idealistic nation in the world.

Address at Sioux Falls [September 8, 1919]

The highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous cooperation of a free people.

Quoted by BERNARD BARUCH, in American Industry at War: A Report of the War Industries Board [March, 1921]

I cannot refrain from saying it: I am not one of those who have the least anxiety about the triumph of the principles I have stood for. I have seen fools resist Providence before and I have seen their destruction, as will come upon these again — utter destruction and contempt. That we shall prevail is as sure as that God reigns.

A work that aspires, however humbly, to the condition of art should carry its justification in every line.

The Nigger of the Narcissus [1898]. Preface

But the artist appeals to that part of our being which is not dependent on wisdom; to that in us which is a gift and not an acquisition — and, therefore, more permanently enduring. He speaks to our capacity for delight and wonder, to the sense of mystery surrounding our lives: to our sense of pity, and beauty, and pain.

Ibid.

The ship, a fragment detached from the earth, went on lonely and swift like a small planet.

Ibid. Chap. 2

Goodbye, brothers! You were a good crowd. As good a crowd as ever fisted with wild cries the beating canvas of a heavy foresail; or tossing aloft, invisible in the night, gave back yell for yell to a westerly gale.

Ibid. Chap. 5

I am a great foe of favouritism in public life, in private life, and even in the delicate relationship of an author to his works.

Lord Jim [1900]. Author's Note

There is a weird power in a spoken word. . . . And a word carries far — very far — deals destruction through time as the bullets go flying through space.

Ibid. Chap. 15

That faculty of beholding at a hint the face of his desire and the shape of his dream, without which the earth would know no lover and no adventurer.

Ibid. Chap. 16

Felicity, felicity — how shall I say it? — is quaffed out of a golden cup in every latitude: the flavour is with you — with you alone, and you can make it as intoxicating as you please.

Lord Jim. Chap. 16

It is when we try to grapple with another man's intimate need that we perceive how incomprehensible, wavering, and misty are the beings that share with us the sight of the stars and the warmth of the sun.

Ibid.

You shall judge of a man by his foes as well as by his friends.

Ibid. Chap. 34

Vanity plays lurid tricks with our memory.

Ibid. Chap. 41

Some great men owe most of their greatness to the ability of detecting in those they destine for their tools the exact quality of strength that matters for their work.

Ibid. Chap. 42

Only a moment; a moment of strength, of romance, of glamour — of youth! . . . A flick of sunshine upon a strange shore, the time to remember, the time for a sigh, and — goodbye! — Night — Goodbye . . . !

Nostromo [1904]. Chap. 6

Efficiency of a practically flawless kind may be reached naturally in the struggle for bread. But there is something beyond — a higher point, a subtle and unmistakable touch of love and pride beyond mere skill; almost an inspiration which gives to all work that finish which is almost art — which is art.

The Mirror of the Sea [1906].
The Fine Art

The East Wind, an interloper in the dominions of Westerly Weather, is an impassive-faced tyrant with a sharp poniard held behind his back for a treacherous stab.

Ibid. Rulers of East and West

The autocratic sway of the West Wind, whether forty north or forty south of the equator, is characterized by an open, generous, frank, barbarous recklessness. For he is a great autocrat, and to be a great autocrat you must be a great barbarian.

Ibid.

What all men are really after is some form, or perhaps only some formula, of peace.

Under Western Eyes [1911].
Part I

A man's real life is that accorded to him in the thoughts of other men by reason of respect or natural love.

Ibid. 1

Let a fool be made serviceable according to his folly.

Ibid. 3

The belief in a supernatural source of evil is not necessary; men alone are quite capable of every wickedness.

Ibid. Part II, 4

Why should a man certain of immortality think of his life at all?

Under Western Eyes. Part II, 4

No woman is an absolute fool. . . . No woman is ever completely deceived.

Ibid. 5

That strange impulse of indiscretion, common to men who lead secret lives, and accounting for the invariable existence of "compromising documents" in all the plots and conspiracies of history.

Ibid. Part III, 1

You can't ignore the importance of a good digestion. The joy of life . . . depends on a sound stomach, whereas a bad digestion inclines one to skepticism, incredulity, breeds black fancies and thoughts of death.

Ibid. 3

All ambitions are lawful except those which climb upward on the miseries or credulities of mankind.

A Personal Record [1912].
Preface

The sight of human affairs deserves admiration and pity. And he is not insensible who pays them the undemonstrative tribute of a sigh which is not a sob, and of a smile which is not a grin.

Ibid.

Only in men's imagination does every truth find an effective and undeniable existence. Imagination, not invention, is the supreme master of art as of life.

Ibid. Chap. 1

For Englishmen especially, of all the races of the earth, a task, any task, undertaken in an adventurous spirit acquires the merit of romance.

Ibid. Chap. 5

There are on earth no actors too humble and obscure not to have a gallery; that gallery which envenoms the play by stealthy jeers, counsels of anger, amused comments, or words of perfidious compassion.

Chance [1914]. Part II, Chap. 4

There is no rest for a messenger till the message is delivered.

[1857–1929]

Conspicuous consumption of valuable goods is a means of reputability to the gentleman of leisure.

The Theory of the Leisure Class [1899]. Chap. 4

With the exception of the instinct of self-preservation, the propensity for emulation is probably the strongest and most alert and persistent of the economic motives proper.

Ibid. Chap. 5

The requirement of conspicuous wastefulness is not commonly present, consciously, in our canons of taste, but it is none the less present as a constraining norm selectively shaping and sustaining our sense of what is beautiful, and guiding our discrimination with respect to what may legitimately be approved as beautiful and what may not.

Ibid. Chap. 6

The dog . . . commends himself to our favour by affording play to our propensity for mastery, and as he is also an item of expense, and commonly serves no industrial purpose, he holds a well-assured place in men's regard as a thing of good repute.

[1] Sung by Marie Dressler [1873–1934] in Tillie's Nightmare.

The Theory of the Leisure Class. Chap. 6

The visible imperfections of the hand-wrought goods, being honorific, are accounted marks of superiority in point of beauty, or serviceability, or both. Hence has arisen that exaltation of the defective, of which John Ruskin and William Morris were such eager spokesmen in their time. . . . The Kelmscott Press reduced the matter to an absurdity by issuing books for modern use, edited with the obsolete spelling, printed in black-letter, and bound in limp vellum fitted with thongs.

Ibid.

Priestly vestments show, in accentuated form, all the features that have been shown to be evidence of a servile status and a vicarious life.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The walking-stick serves the purpose of an advertisement that the bearer's hands are employed otherwise than in useful effort, and it therefore has utility as an evidence of leisure.

Ibid. Chap. 10

The sporting man's sense of luck and chance is an inarticulate or inchoate animism . . . it implies the possibility of propitiating, or of deceiving and cajoling, or otherwise disturbing the unfolding of propensities resident in the objects which constitute the apparatus and accessories of any game of skill or chance. There are few sporting men who are not in the habit of wearing charms or talismans.

Ibid. Chap. 11

The adoption of the cap and gown is one of the striking atavistic features of modern college life.

Ibid. Chap. 14

The classics have scarcely lost in absolute value as a voucher of scholastic respectability, since for this purpose it is only necessary that the scholar should be able to put in evidence some learning which is conventionally recognized as evidence of wasted time.

The Theory of the Leisure Class. Chap. 14

As felicitous an instance of futile classicism as can well be found is the conventional spelling of the English language. English orthography satisfies all the requirements of the canons of reputability under the law of conspicuous waste. It is archaic, cumbrous, and ineffective; its acquisition consumes much time and effort; failure to acquire it is easy of detection.

WILLISTON FISH
[1858–1939]

I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound and disposing mind and memory [he lingered on the word memory], do now make and publish this my last will and testament, in order, as justly as I may, to distribute my interests in the world among succeeding men.

A Last Will[1]

I leave to children exclusively, but only for the life of their childhood, all and every the dandelions of the fields and the daisies thereof, with the right to play among them freely.

[1] In Harper's Weekly, September 3, 1898, reprinted by request of many readers in the issue of December 12, 1908.

A Last Will

And I devise to children the yellow shores of creeks and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, with the dragon-flies that skim the surface of said waters.

Ibid.

To lovers I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red, red roses by the wall, the snow of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of music, or aught else they may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

Ibid.

To those who are no longer children, or youths, or lovers, I leave, too, the knowledge of what a rare, rare world it is.

Ibid.

The plain man is the basic clod
From which we grow the demigod;
And in the average man is curled
The hero stuff that rules the world.
In Memoriam. Stanza 2

Seek not for fresher founts afar,
Just drop your bucket where you are.
Opportunity

No financial throe volcanic
Ever yet was known to scare it;
Never yet was any panic
Scared the firm of Grin and Barrett.
The Firm of Grin and Barrett. Stanza 1

A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf near three centuries dead.
They followed still his crooked way,
And lost one hundred years a day;
For thus such reverence is lent
To well-established precedent.
The Calf-Path

A rodless Walton of the brooks,
A bloodless sportsman, I.[1]
The Bloodless Sportsman

The woods are made for the hunters of dreams,
The brooks for the fishers of song;
To the hunters who hunt for the gunless game
The streams and the woods belong.
Ibid.

Let me live in my house by the side of the road
Where the race of men go by;
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish — so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend of man.
The House by the Side of the Road.[2] Stanza 5

On the thirty-second day of the thirteenth month of the eighth day of the week,
On the twenty-fifth hour and the sixty-first minute, we'll find all things that we seek.
The Eighth Day of the Week

I say the very things that make the greatest Stir
An' the most interestin' things, are things that didn't occur.[3]
Things That Didn't Occur

He had a startling genius, but somehow it didn't emerge;
Always on the evolution of things that wouldn't evolve;
Always verging toward some climax, but he never reached the verge;

REMY DE GOURMONT
[1858–1915]

Aesthetic emotion puts man in a state favorable to the reception of erotic emotion. Art is the accomplice of love. Take love away and there is no longer art.

Decadence [2]

I do not believe it useful to generalize opinions, to teach admirations. It is for each man to procure himself the emotion he needs, and the morality which suits him.

I wish to preach, not the doctrine of ignoble ease,[2] but the doctrine of the strenuous life.

Speech before the Hamilton Club, Chicago [April 10, 1899]

Far better it is to dare mighty things, to win glorious triumphs, even though checkered by failure, than to take rank with those poor spirits who neither enjoy much nor suffer much, because they live in the gray twilight that knows not victory nor defeat.

We must remember not to judge any public servant by any one act, and especially should we beware of attacking the men who are merely the occasions and not the causes of disaster.

The Strenuous Life [1900]

If we seek merely swollen, slothful ease and ignoble peace, if we shrink from the hard contests where men must win at the hazard of their lives and at the risk of all they hold dear, then bolder and stronger peoples will pass us by, and will win for themselves the domination of the world.

The first requisite of a good citizen in this Republic of ours is that he shall be able and willing to pull his weight.

Speech, New York [November 11, 1902]

There is a homely adage which runs, "Speak softly and carry a big stick; you will go far." If the American nation will speak softly and yet build and keep at a pitch of the highest training a thoroughly efficient navy, the Monroe Doctrine will go far.

Speech at Minnesota State Fair [September 2, 1901]

A man who is good enough to shed his blood for his country is good enough to be given a square deal afterwards. More than that no man is entitled to, and less than that no man shall have.

Speech at Springfield, Illinois [July 4, 1903]

Chronic wrongdoing, or an impotence which results in a general loosening of the ties of civilized society, may in America . . . ultimately require intervention by some civilized nation, and in the Western Hemisphere the adherence of the United States to the Monroe Doctrine may force the United States, however reluctantly, in flagrant cases of such wrongdoing or impotence, to the exercise of an international police power.

Annual Message to Congress (Corollary to the Monroe Doctrine) [December 6, 1904]

Men with the muck-rake are often indispensable to the well-being of society, but only if they know when to stop raking the muck.

Nature-faker.

Everybody's Magazine [September, 1907]

To waste, to destroy, our natural resources, to skin and exhaust the land instead of using it so as to increase its usefulness, will result in undermining in the days of our children the very prosperity which we ought by right to hand down to them amplified and developed.

Message to Congress [December 3, 1907]

The object of government is the welfare of the people. The material progress and prosperity of a nation are desirable chiefly so far as they lead to the moral and material welfare of all good citizens.

The New Nationalism [1910]

Every man holds his property subject to the general right of the community to regulate its use to whatever degree the public welfare may require it.

Speech, Osawatomie [August 31, 1910]

The lunatic fringe in all reform movements.

Autobiography [1913]

We demand that big business give the people a square deal; in return we must insist that when any one engaged in big business honestly endeavors to do right he shall himself be given a square deal.

Ibid.

We stand equally against government by a plutocracy and government by a mob. There is something to be said for government by a great aristocracy which has furnished leaders to the nation in peace and war for generations; even a democrat like myself must admit this. But there is absolutely nothing to be said for government by a plutocracy, for government by men very powerful in certain lines and gifted with "the money touch," but with ideals which in their essence are merely those of so many glorified pawn-brokers.

Letter to Sir Edward Grey [November 15, 1913]

There is no room in this country for hyphenated Americanism. . . . The one absolutely certain way of bringing this nation to ruin, of preventing all possibility of its continuing to be a nation at all, would be to permit it to become a tangle of squabbling nationalities.

Speech before the Knights of Columbus, New York [October 12, 1915]

We have room for but one language here, and that is the English language, for we intend to see that the crucible turns our people out as Americans, and not as dwellers in a polyglot boarding house.[1]

What is so sweet and dear
As a prosperous morn in May,
The confident prime of the day,
And the dauntless youth of the year,
When nothing that asks for bliss,
Asking aright, is denied,
And half of the world a bridegroom is,
And half of the world a bride.

Ode in May. Stanza 2

The Poet gathers fruit from every tree,
Yea, grapes from thorns, and figs from thistles, he.

Epigram

Say what thou wilt, the young are happy never.
Give me bless'd Age, beyond the fire and fever, —
Past the delight that shatters, hope that stings,
And eager flutt'ring of life's ignorant wings.

Epigram

Strange the world about me lies,
Never yet familiar grown —
Still disturbs me with surprise,
Haunts me like a face half known.

The New Spirit

If men and women are to understand each other, to enter into each other's nature with mutual sympathy, and to become capable of genuine comradeship, the foundation must be laid in youth.

The Task of Social Hygiene. Chap. 1

The larger our great cities grow, the more irresistible becomes the attraction which they exert on the children of the country, who are fascinated by them, as the birds are fascinated by the lighthouse or the moths by the candle.

Ibid. Chap. 5

There are few among us who have not suffered from too early familiarity with the Bible and the conceptions of religion.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The German feels nothing of that sensitive jealousy with which the French seek to guard private life and the rights of the individual.

Ibid. Chap. 9

The Englishman's reverence for the individual's rights goes beyond the Frenchman's, for in France there is a tendency to subordinate the individual to the family, and in England the interests of the individual predominate.

Ibid.

So far as business and money are concerned, a country gains nothing by a successful war, even though that war involves the acquisition of immense new provinces.

Ibid. Chap. 10

Conquest brings self-conceit and intolerance, the reckless inflation and dissipation of energies. Defeat brings prudence and concentration; it ennobles and fortifies.

Ibid.

There has never been any country at every moment so virtuous and so wise that it has not sometimes needed to be saved from itself.

The Task of Social Hygiene. Chap. 10

Those persons who are burning to display heroism may rest assured that the course of social evolution will offer them every opportunity.

Ibid.

The family only represents one aspect, however important an aspect, of a human being's functions and activities. . . . A life is beautiful and ideal, or the reverse, only when we have taken into our consideration the social as well as the family relationship.

Little Essays of Love and Virtue. Chap. 1

One can know nothing of giving aught that is worthy to give unless one also knows how to take.

Ibid.

That indeed were a world fit to perish, wherein the moralist had set up the ignoble maxim: Safety first.

Ibid. Chap. 2

Ibid. Chap. 3

All civilization has from time to time become a thin crust over a volcano of revolution.

Ibid. Chap. 7

The greatest task before civilization at present is to make machines what they ought to be, the slaves, instead of the masters of men.

Ibid.

The art of dancing stands at the source of all the arts that express themselves first in the human person. The art of building, or architecture, is the beginning of all the arts that lie outside the person; and in the end they unite.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 2

Dancing is the loftiest, the most moving, the most beautiful of the arts, because it is no mere translation or abstraction from life; it is life itself.

Ibid.

The place where optimism most flourishes is the lunatic asylum.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 3

Thinking in its lower grades is comparable to paper money, and in its higher forms it is a kind of poetry.

Ibid.

In philosophy, it is not the attainment of the goal that matters, it is the things that are met with by the way.

Ibid.

Every man of genius sees the world at a different angle from his fellows, and there is his tragedy.

Ibid.

The mathematician has reached the highest rung on the ladder of human thought.

Ibid.

A man must not swallow more beliefs than he can digest.

Ibid. Chap. 5

The Promised Land always lies on the other side of a wilderness.

Ibid.

What we call "morals" is simply blind obedience to words of command.

Ibid. Chap. 6

The world's greatest thinkers have often been amateurs; for high thinking is the outcome of fine and independent living, and for that a professional chair offers no special opportunities.

Ibid.

For the artist life is always a discipline, and no discipline can be without pain. That is so even of dancing, which of all the arts is most associated in the popular mind with pleasure. To learn to dance is the most austere of disciplines.

Ibid.

The prevalence of suicide, without doubt, is a test of height in civilization; it means that the population is winding up its nervous and intellectual system to the utmost point of tension and that sometimes it snaps.[1]

Ibid. Chap. 7

The sun and the moon and the stars would have disappeared long ago — as even their infinitely more numerous analogues on the earth beneath are likely to disappear — had they happened to be within the reach of predatory human hands.

The Dance of Life. Chap. 7

Had there been a Lunatic Asylum in the suburbs of Jerusalem, Jesus Christ would infallibly have been shut up in it at the outset of his public career. That interview with Satan on a pinnacle of the Temple would alone have damned him, and everything that happened after could but have confirmed the diagnosis.

[1] I was brought up in the Church of England and in the High Church party, which is much the best religion I have ever come across. But Lemprière's "Classical Dictionary," read when I was eight, made me prefer paganism to Christianity; I abandoned Christianity at thirteen, and became an atheist at twenty-one. . . .

I am not a pessimist but a pejorist (as George Eliot said she was not an optimist but a meliorist); and that philosophy is founded on my observation of the world, not on anything so trivial and irrelevant as personal history. Secondly, I did not begin to write poetry in earnest until the really emotional part of my life was over; and my poetry, so far as I could make out, sprang chiefly from physical causes, such as a relaxed sore throat during my most prolific period, the first five months of 1895.

Good literature continually read for pleasure must, let us hope, do some good to the reader: must quicken his perception though dull, and sharpen his discrimination though blunt, and mellow the rawness of his personal opinions.

The Name and Nature of Poetry[2]

Poems very seldom consist of poetry and nothing else; and pleasure can be derived also from their other ingredients.

Ibid.

Good religious poetry, whether in Keble or Dante or Job, is likely to be most justly appreciated and most discriminatingly relished by the undevout.

Even when poetry has a meaning, as it usually has, it may be inadvisable to draw it out. . . . Perfect understanding will sometimes almost extinguish pleasure.

[1] Written January 12, 1918, on his last night as British Ambassador in Washington.

[2] Nephew of Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War in Lincoln's Cabinet. He was chief disbursing officer of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, and was deputed by General Pershing to speak on behalf of the A. E. F. on this occasion.

[3] The remark has also been attributed to General Pershing, who in My Experiences in the World War [1931] says he cannot remember having said "anything so splendid." However, one of the uniformed American correspondents present upon the July 4, 1917, occasion, Naboth Hedin, states that he heard Pershing pronounce the phrase three weeks earlier on June 14, his second day in Paris. "Pershing stepped up to it [Lafayette's grave] and saluted in his best manner and then said in a loud voice, 'Lafayette, we are here.' I was about twenty feet away." (Letter from Naboth Hedin to Samuel Eliot Morison [June 21, 1954].) Stanton used the phrase again on July 14.

Grace of the Way. Stanza 6

Know you what it is to be a child? It is to be something very different from the man of to-day. It is to have a spirit yet streaming from the waters of baptism; it is to believe in love, to believe in loveliness, to believe in belief; it is to be so little that the elves can reach to whisper in your ear; it is to turn pumpkins into coaches, and mice into horses, lowness into loftiness, and nothing into everything, for each child has its fairy godmother in its soul.
Shelley[1]

Children's griefs are little, certainly; but so is the child, so is its endurance, so is its field of vision, while its nervous impressionability is keener than ours. Grief is a matter of relativity; the sorrow should be estimated by its proportion to the sorrower; a gash is as painful to one as an amputation to another.

[1861–1947]

The human body is an instrument for the production of art in the life of the human soul.
Adventures of Ideas [1933]. Chap. 18

A general definition of civilization: a civilized society is exhibiting the five qualities of Truth, Beauty, Adventure, Art, Peace.
Ibid. Chap. 19

The deliberate aim at Peace very easily passes into its bastard substitute, Anaesthesia.
Adventures of Ideas. Chap. 20

Youth is life as yet untouched by tragedy. . . . When youth has once grasped where Beauty dwells — with a real knowledge and not as a mere matter of literary phraseology — its self-surrender is absolute.
Ibid.

There are no whole truths; all truths are half-truths. It is trying to treat them as whole truths that plays the devil.
Dialogues of Alfred North Whitehead [1953].[1] Page 16

The vitality of thought is in adventure. Ideas won't keep. Something must be done about them. When the idea is new, its custodians have fervour, live for it, and, if need be, die for it.

Intelligence is quickness to apprehend as distinct from ability, which is capacity to act wisely on the thing apprehended.
Ibid. Page 135

Our minds are finite, and yet even in these circumstances of finitude we are surrounded by possibilities that are infinite, and the purpose of human life is to grasp as much as we can out of that infinitude.

A culture is in its finest flower before it begins to analyze itself.

A philosopher of imposing stature doesn't think in a vacuum. Even his most abstract ideas are, to some extent, conditioned by what is or is not known in the time when he lives.

Dialogues of Alfred North Whitehead. Page 229

With the sense of sight, the idea communicates the emotion, whereas, with sound, the emotion communicates the idea, which is more direct and therefore more powerful.

Land of Hope and Glory. Chorus

Edward Fitzgerald said that he wished we had more lives of obscure persons; one wants to know what other people are thinking and feeling about it all. . . . If the dullest person in the world would only put down sincerely what he or she thought about his or her life, about work and love, religion and emotion, it would be a fascinating document.

Fanaticism consists in redoubling your efforts when you have forgotten your aim.

The Life of Reason [1905–1906]. Vol. I

The human race, in its intellectual life, is organized like the bees: the masculine soul is a worker, sexually atrophied, and essentially dedicated to impersonal and universal arts; the feminine is a queen, infinitely fertile, omnipresent in its brooding industry, but passive and abounding in intuitions without method and passions without justice.

American life is a powerful solvent. It seems to neutralise every intellectual element, however tough and alien it may be, and to fuse it in the native good-will, complacency, thoughtlessness, and optimism.

Character and Opinion in the United States [1920]

All his life he [the American] jumps into the train after it has started and jumps out before it has stopped; and he never once gets left behind, or breaks a leg.

He carries his English weather in his heart wherever he goes, and it becomes a cool spot in the desert, and a steady and sane oracle amongst all the delirium of mankind.

Soliloquies in England [1922]. The British Character

England is the paradise of individuality, eccentricity, heresy, anomalies, hobbies, and humours.

Ibid.

The world is a perpetual caricature of itself; at every moment it is the mockery and the contradiction of what it is pretending to be.

Ibid. Dickens

There is no cure for birth and death save to enjoy the interval.

Soliloquies in England. War Shrines

I like to walk about amidst the beautiful things that adorn the world; but private wealth I should decline, or any sort of personal possessions, because they would take away my liberty.

Ibid. The Irony of Liberalism

My atheism, like that of Spinoza, is true piety towards the universe and denies only gods fashioned by men in their own image, to be servants of their human interests.

As our private memory is not a merely passive retention of sensations, so in literature the critical spirit is at work as a conscious energy of selection. The function of criticism is far removed from the surrender to luxurious revery.

Shelburne Essays [1904–1935].
Criticism

Great music is a psychical storm, agitating to fathomless depths the mystery of the past within us. Or we might say that it is a prodigious incantation. There are tones that call up all ghosts of youth and joy and tenderness; — there are tones that evoke all phantom pains of perished passion; — there are tones that revive all dead sensations of majesty and might and glory, — all expired exultations, — all forgotten magnanimities. Well may the influence of music seem inexplicable to the man who idly dreams that his life began less than a hundred years ago! He who has been initiated into the truth knows that to every ripple of melody, to every billow of harmony, there answers within him, out of the Sea of Death and Birth, some eddying immeasurable of ancient pleasure and pain.

But the fool he called her his lady fair —
(Even as you and I!)

The Vampire [1897]. Stanza 1

Oh, the years we waste and the tears we waste
And the work of our head and hand
Belong to the woman who did not know . . .
And did not understand.

The Pity of Love [1893]

The brawling of a sparrow in the eaves,
The brilliant moon and all the milky sky,
And all that famous harmony of leaves,
Had blotted out man's image and his cry.

A girl arose that had red mournful lips
And seemed the greatness of the world in tears,
Doomed like Odysseus and the labouring ships
And proud as Priam murdered with his peers;

The fascination of what's difficult
Has dried the sap out of my veins, and rent

Spontaneous joy and natural content
Out of my heart.
The Fascination of What's Difficult [1910]

Wine comes in at the mouth
And love comes in at the eye;
That's all we shall know for truth
Before we grow old and die.
A Drinking Song [1910]

Though leaves are many, the root is one;
Through all the lying days of my youth
I swayed my leaves and flowers in the sun;
Now I may wither into the truth.
The Coming of Wisdom with Time [1910]

Be secret and exult,
Because of all things known
That is most difficult.
To a Friend Whose Work Has Come to Nothing [1914]

I made my song a coat
Covered with embroideries
Out of old mythologies
From heel to throat;
But the fools caught it,
Wore it in the world's eyes
As though they'd wrought it.
Song, let them take it,
For there's more enterprise
In walking naked.
A Coat [1914]

I know that I shall meet my fate
Somewhere among the clouds above;
Those that I fight I do not hate,
Those that I guard I do not love;
My country is Kiltartan Cross,
My countrymen Kiltartan's poor.
An Irish Airman Foresees His Death [1919]

Nor law, nor duty bade me fight,
Nor public men, nor cheering crowds,
A lonely impulse of delight
Drove to this tumult in the clouds;
I balanced all, brought all to mind,
The years to come seemed waste of breath,
A waste of breath the years behind
In balance with this life, this death.

All the wild witches, those most noble ladies,
For all their broom-sticks and their tears,
Their angry tears, are gone.
Lines Written in Dejection [1919]

I mourn for that most lonely thing; and yet God's will be done:
I knew a phoenix in my youth, so let them have their day.
His Phoenix [1919]. Stanza 4

We have lit upon the gentle, sensitive mind
And lost the old nonchalance of the hand;
Whether we have chosen chisel, pen or brush,
We are but critics, or but half create.

Ibid. Stanza 7

An intellectual hatred is the worst,
So let her think opinions are accursed.
A Prayer for My Daughter. Stanza 8

A musician who would give me pleasure should not repeat a line, or put more than one note to a syllable. I am a poet not a musician, and dislike to have my words distorted or their animation destroyed, even though the musician claims to have expressed their meaning in a different medium.
A Note on the Setting of These Poems to Music [1922]

An aged man is but a paltry thing,
A tattered coat upon a stick, unless

Ibid. Stanza 3

Once out of nature I shall never take
My bodily form from any natural thing,
But such a form as Grecian goldsmiths make
Of hammered gold and gold enamelling
To keep a drowsy Emperor awake;
Or set upon a golden bough to sing
To lords and ladies of Byzantium
Of what is past, or passing, or to come.[1]

He that sings a lasting song
Thinks in a marrow-bone.
A Prayer for Old Age [1935]. Stanza 1

I pray — for fashion's word is out
And prayer comes round again —
That I may seem, though I die old,
A foolish, passionate man.

[1866–   ]

Romantic plays with happy endings are almost of necessity inferior in artistic value to true tragedies. Not, one would hope, simply because they end happily; happiness in itself is certainly not less beautiful than grief; but because a tragedy in its great moments can generally afford to be sincere, while romantic plays live in an atmosphere of ingenuity and make-believe.

Th' higher up a coort is, the less [the judges] see iv each other. Their office hours are fr'm a quarther to wan leap years. Ye take a lively lawyer that's wurruked twinty hours a day suin' sthreet railrood comp'nies an' boost him onto a high coort an' he can't think out iv a hammock. Th' more exalted . . . th' joodicyal station, th' more it's like a dormitory.

Observations by Mr. Dooley [1902]. The Law's Delays

Unforchunitly diplomacy on'y goes as far as the dure. It is onable to give protection to th' customer, so whin he laves th' shop th' sthrong arm men iv th' Sinit knocks him down an' takes fr'm him ivrything he got inside an' more too. Di-plomacy has become a philanthropic pursoot like shop-keepin', but politics, me lords, is still th' same ol' spoort iv highway robb'ry.

Observations by Mr. Dooley. International Amenities

Ye see, a prince is a gr-reat man in th' ol' counthry, but he niver is as gr-reat over there as he is here. Whin he's at home he's something th' people can't help an' they don't mind him. He's like an iron lamp post, station'ry, ornymintal, an' useful to let people know where they are. But whin he comes to this home iv raypublican simplicity, he's all that th' wurrud prince wud imply, an' it implies more to us thin to annywan else.

Ibid. Prince Henry's Reception

Spain was our frind till th' war was over. Thin she rounded on us an' sold us th' Ph'lippines.

Ibid. European Intervention

Th' flag [1] floats free an' well guarded over th' govermint offices, an' th' cheery people go an' come on their errands — go out alone an' come back with th' throops. Iverywhere happiness, contint, love iv th' shtep-mother counthry, excipt in places where there ar-re people.

Ibid. The Philippine Peace

A rayformer thinks he was ilicted because he was a rayformer, whin th' thruth iv th' matther is he was ilicted because no wan knew him. Ye can always ilict a man in this counthry on that platform. If I was runnin' f'r office, I'd change me name, an' have printed on me cards: "Give him a chanst; he can't be worse."

Ibid. Reform Administration

A reg'lar pollytician can't give away an' alley without blushin', but a business man who is in pollytics jus' to see that th' civil sarvice law gets thurly enfoorced, will give Lincoln Park an' th' public libr'y to th' beef thrust, charge an admission price to th' lake front an' make it a felony f'r annywan to buy stove polish outside iv his store, an' have it all put down to public improvemints with a pitcher iv him in th' corner stone.

But th' best thing about a little judicyous swearin' is that it keeps th' temper. 'Twas intended as a compromise between runnin' away an' fightin'. Befure it was invinted they was on'y th' two ways out iv an argymint.

Ibid. Swearing

It must be a good thing to be good or ivrybody wudden't be pretendin' he was. But I don't think they'se anny such thing as hypocrisy in th' wurruld. They can't be. If ye'd turn on th' gas in th' darkest heart ye'd find it had a good raison for th' worst things it done, a good varchous raison, like needin' th' money or punishin' th' wicked or tachin' people a lesson to be more careful, or protectin' th' liberties iv mankind, or needin' th' money.

Ibid. Hypocrisy

I don't think we injye other people's sufferin', Hinnissy. It isn't acshally injyement. But we feel betther f'r it.

Ibid. Enjoyment

Whin a woman discovers she has a soul, Hinnissy, 'tis time she was sint to a rest-cure. It niver comes till late in life, an' ye can't tell what she'll do about it.

Dissertations by Mr. Dooley [1906]. Royal Doings

Why shud a woman want to be thin onless she is thin? Th' idee iv female beauty that all gr-reat men, fr'm Julius Caesar to mesilf, has held, is much more like a bar'l thin a clothespole.

It thinks it gets more that way. They ar-re still a happy fam'ly, but it's more like an English fam'ly. They don't speak.

"Annyhow, I bet no wan iver took Binjamin Franklin f'r a waiter."

"I wondher why?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

Ibid. Diplomatic Uniforms

"If ye had a boy wud ye sind him to colledge?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "at th' age whin a boy is fit to be in colledge I wudden't have him around th' house."

Ibid. The Intellectual Life

Th' prisidincy is th' highest office in th' gift iv th' people. Th' vice-prisidincy is th' next highest an' th' lowest. It isn't a crime exactly. Ye can't be sint to jail f'r it, but it's a kind iv a disgrace. It's like writin' anonymous letters.

STEPHEN LEACOCK
[1869–1944]

If I were founding a university I would found first a smoking room; then when I had a little more money in hand I would found a dormitory; then after that, or more probably with it, a decent reading room and a library. After that, if I still had more money that I couldn't use, I would hire a professor and get some textbooks.
Oxford As I See It

He flung himself from the room, flung himself upon his horse and rode madly off in all directions.

Penrod was doing something very unusual and rare, something almost never accomplished except by colored people or by a boy in school on a spring day: he was doing really nothing at all. He was merely a state of being.

Penrod [1914]. Chap. 8

There are two things that will be believed of any man whatsoever, and one of them is that he has taken to drink.

Ibid. Chap. 10

They were upon their great theme: "When I get to be a man!" Being human, though boys, they considered their present estate too commonplace to be dwelt upon. So, when the old men gather, they say: "When I was a boy!" It really is the land of nowadays that we never discover.

[1871–1922]

When from a long-distant past nothing subsists, after the people are dead, after the things are broken and scattered, still, alone, more fragile, but with more vitality, more unsubstantial, more persistent, more faithful, the smell and taste of things remain poised a long time, like souls, ready to remind us, waiting and hoping for their moment, amid the ruins of all the rest; and bear unfaltering, in the tiny and almost impalpable drop of their essence, the vast structure of recollection.

Remembrance of Things Past [1] [1913–1926]. Swann's Way

In his younger days a man dreams of possessing the heart of the woman whom he loves; later, the feeling that he possesses the heart of a woman may be enough to make him fall in love with her.

Ibid. Within a Budding Grove, Part I

The time which we have at our disposal every day is elastic; the passions that we feel expand it, those that we inspire contract it; and habit fills up what remains.

Ibid.

Untruthfulness and dishonesty were with me, as with most people, called into being in so immediate, so contingent a fashion, and in self-defence, by some particular interest, that my mind, fixed on some lofty ideal, allowed my character, in the darkness below, to set about those urgent, sordid tasks, and did not look down to observe them.

Ibid. The Guermantes Way, Part I

Like everybody who is not in love, he imagined that one chose the person whom one loved after endless deliberations and on the strength of various qualities and advantages.

Ibid. Cities of the Plain, Part I

We passionately long that there may be another life in which we shall be similar to what we are here below. But we do not pause to reflect that, even without waiting for that other life, in this life, after a few years we are unfaithful to what we have been, to what we wished to remain immortally.

Remembrance of Things Past. Cities of the Plain, Part II

It is often simply from want of the creative spirit that we do not go to the full extent of suffering. And the most terrible reality brings us, with our suffering, the joy of a great discovery, because it merely gives a new and clear form to what we have long been ruminating without suspecting it.

Ibid.

The bonds that unite another person to ourself exist only in our mind. Memory as it grows fainter relaxes them, and notwithstanding the illusion by which we would fain be cheated and with which, out of love, friendship, politeness, deference, duty, we cheat other people, we exist alone. Man is the creature that cannot emerge from himself, that knows his fellows only in himself; when he asserts the contrary, he is lying.

Ibid. The Sweet Cheat Gone

We do not succeed in changing things according to our desire, but gradually our desire changes. The situation that we hoped to change because it was intolerable becomes unimportant. We have not managed to surmount the obstacle, as we were absolutely determined to do, but life has taken us round it, led us past it, and then if we turn round to gaze at the remote past, we can barely catch sight of it, so imperceptible has it become.

Ibid.

There is not a woman in the world the possession of whom is as precious as that of the truths which she reveals to us by causing us to suffer.

Ibid.

We are healed of a suffering only by experiencing it to the full.

Ibid.

Happiness is beneficial for the body but it is grief that develops the powers of the mind.

Ibid. The Past Recaptured

As for happiness, it has hardly more than one useful quality, namely to make unhappiness possible. In our happiness, we should form very sweet bonds, full of confidence and attachment, in order that the sundering of them may cause us that priceless rending of the heart which is called unhappiness.

There are two good things in life, freedom of thought and freedom of action.

Of Human Bondage [1915]. Chap. 23

Like all weak men he laid an exaggerated stress on not changing one's mind.

Ibid. Chap. 39

People ask you for criticism, but they only want praise.

Ibid. Chap. 50

There is nothing so degrading as the constant anxiety about one's means of livelihood. . . . Money is like a sixth sense without which you cannot make a complete use of the other five.

Ibid. Chap. 51

The mystic sees the ineffable, and the psycho-pathologist the unspeakable.

The Moon and Sixpence [1919]. Chap. 1

I forget who it was that recommended men for their soul's good to do each day two things they disliked:[2] . . . it is a precept that I have followed scrupulously; for every day I have got up and I have gone to bed.

The Moon and Sixpence. Chap. 2

Impropriety is the soul of wit.[1]

Ibid. Chap. 4

Conscience is the guardian in the individual of the rules which the community has evolved for its own preservation.

Ibid. Chap. 14

It is not true that suffering ennobles the character; happiness does that sometimes, but suffering, for the most part, makes men petty and vindictive.

Ibid. Chap. 17

A woman can forgive a man for the harm he does her, but she can never forgive him for the sacrifices he makes on her account.

Ibid. Chap. 41

He made one laugh sometimes by speaking the truth, but this is a form of humour which gains its force only by it unusualness.

Ibid. Chap. 44

Do you know that conversation is one of the greatest pleasures in life? But it wants leisure.

The Trembling of a Leaf [1921]. Chap. 3

The tragedy of love is indifference.

Ibid. Chap. 4

I would sooner read a time-table or a catalogue than nothing at all. They are much more entertaining than half the novels that are written.

The Summing Up [1938]

Life is too short to do anything for oneself that one can pay others to do for one.

Ibid.

You must not pursue a success, but fly from it.

Ibid.

If a nation values anything more than freedom, it will lose its freedom; and the irony of it is that if it is comfort or money that it values more, it will lose that too.

Strictly Personal [1941]. Chap. 31

The Palatine. Stanza 3

No one can build his security upon the nobleness of another person.

Alexander's Bridge [1912]. Chap. 8

There are only two or three human stories, and they go on repeating themselves as fiercely as if they had never happened before.

O Pioneers! [1913]. Part II, Chap. 4

I like trees because they seem more resigned to the way they have to live than other things do.

Ibid. Chap. 8

We all like people who do things, even if we only see their faces on a cigar-box lid.

The Song of the Lark [1915]. Part I, Chap. 18

Artistic growth is, more than it is anything else, a refining of the sense of truthfulness. The stupid believe that to be truthful is easy; only the artist, the great artist, knows how difficult it is.

Ibid. Part VI, Chap. 11

Winter lies too long in country towns; hangs on until it is stale and shabby, old and sullen.

My Ántonia [1918]. Book II, Chap. 7

Old men are like that, you know. It makes them feel important to think they're in love with somebody.

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 4

Art, it seems to me, should simplify. That, indeed, is very nearly the whole of the higher artistic process; finding what conventions of form and what detail one can do without and yet preserve the spirit of the whole — so that all that one has suppressed and cut away is there to the reader's consciousness as much as if it were in type on the page.

On the Art of Fiction [1920]

That irregular and intimate quality of things made entirely by the human hand.

Death Comes for the Archbishop [1927]. Book I, Chap. 3

The Miracles of the Church seem to me to rest not so much upon faces or voices or healing power coming suddenly near to us from afar off, but upon our perceptions being made finer, so that for a moment our eyes can see and our ears can hear what is there about us always.

Ibid. Chap. 4

The universal human yearning for something permanent, enduring, without shadow of change.

Ibid. Book III, Chap. 3

Only solitary men know the full joys of friendship. Others have their family; but to a solitary and an exile his friends are everything.

Shadows on the Rock [1931]. Book III, Chap. 5

There are all those early memories; one cannot get another set; one has only those.

Ibid. Book IV, Chap. 2

These coppers, big and little, these brooms and clouts and brushes, were tools; and with them one made, not shoes or cabinet-work, but life itself. One made a climate within a climate; one made the days, — the complexion, the special flavor, the special happiness of each day as it passed; one made life.

Ibid. Chap. 3

Sometimes a neighbor whom we have disliked a lifetime for his arrogance and conceit lets fall a single commonplace remark that shows us another side, another man, really; a man uncertain, and puzzled, and in the dark like ourselves.

Whoever dared raise a hand against Rome would be guilty of matricide in the eyes of the civilized world and in the eternal judgments of God.
Address to the College of Cardinals, Rome [June 2, 1944]

Private property is a natural fruit of labor, a product of intense activity of man, acquired through his energetic determination to ensure and develop with his own strength his own existence and that of his family, and to create for himself and his own an existence of just freedom, not only economic, but also political, cultural and religious.
Radio broadcast [September 1, 1944]

If a worker is deprived of hope to acquire some personal property, what other natural stimulus can be offered him that will inspire him to hard work, labor, saving and sobriety today, when so many nations and men have lost everything and all they have left is their capacity for work?
Ibid.

Commonplace people dislike tragedy, because they dare not suffer and cannot exult. The truth and rapture of man are holy things, not lightly to be scorned. A carelessness of life and beauty marks the glutton, the idler, and the fool in their deadly path across history.

I do not believe that civilization will be wiped out in a war fought with the atomic bomb. Perhaps two thirds of the people of the earth might be killed, but enough men capable of thinking, and enough books, would be left to start again, and civilization could be restored.

Ibid.

Since I do not foresee that atomic energy is to be a great boon for a long time, I have to say that for the present it is a menace. Perhaps it is well that it should be. It may intimidate the human race into bringing order into its international affairs, which, without the pressure of fear, it would not do.

[1] Charles-Augustin Sainte-Beuve [1804–1869] is the first writer known to have likened a poet's retreat to an ivory tower. In his Pensées d'Août, To M. Villemain, St. 3, dated October, 1837, he wrote:

Hugo, dur partisan
. . . combattit sous l'armure,
Et tint haut sa bannière au milieu du murmure:
Il la maintient encore; et Vigny, plus secret,
Comme en sa tour d'ivoire, avant midi, rentrait (Hugo, stern partisan
. . . fought under armor,
And held his banner high in the midst of the tumult:
He holds it still; and Vigny, more secret,
As if in his tower of ivory, retired before noon).

The poet, retired in his Tower of Ivory, isolated, according to his desire, from the world of man, resembles, whether he so wishes or not, another solitary figure, the watcher enclosed for months at a time in a lighthouse at the head of a cliff. — JULES DE GAULTIER [1858–?]: La Guerre et les Destinées de l'Art

Prejudices, Third Series. Chap. 14

To be happy one must be (a) well fed, unhounded by sordid cares, at ease in Zion, (b) full of a comfortable feeling of superiority to the masses of one's fellow men, and (c) delicately and unceasingly amused according to one's taste. It is my contention that, if this definition be accepted, there is no country in the world wherein a man constituted as I am — a man of my peculiar weakness, vanities, appetites, and aversions — can be so happy as he can be in the United States. Going further, I lay down the doctrine that it is a sheer physical impossibility for such a man to live in the United States and not be happy.

On Being an American [1922]

In the modern social order, the person is sacrificed to the individual. The individual is given universal suffrage, equality of rights, freedom of opinion; while the person, isolated, naked, with no social armor to sustain and protect him, is left to the mercy of all the devouring forces which threaten the life of the soul, exposed to relentless actions and reactions of conflicting interests and appetites. . . . These unhappy times call for the building of plans . . . that build from the bottom up and not from the top down, that put their faith once more in the forgotten man[1] at the bottom of the economic pyramid.

Radio address [April 7, 1932]

The country needs and, unless I mistake its temper, the country demands bold, persistent experimentation. It is common sense to take a method and try it: If it fails, admit it frankly and try another. But above all, try something.

If I were asked to state the great objective which Church and State are both demanding for the sake of every man and woman and child in this country, I would say that that great objective is "a more abundant life."

Address before Federal Council of Churches of Christ [December 6, 1933]

I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few. I prefer and I am sure you prefer that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than he has ever known before in the history of America.

Address at Temple University [February 22, 1936]

Ibid.

The test of our progress is not whether we add more to the abundance of those who have much; it is whether we provide enough for those who have too little.

Ibid.

The epidemic of world lawlessness is spreading. When an epidemic of physical disease starts to spread, the community approves and joins in a quarantine of the patients in order to protect the health of the community against the spread of the disease. . . . The will for peace on the part of peace-loving nations must express itself to the end that nations that may be tempted to violate their agreements and the rights of others will desist from such a course. There must be positive endeavors to preserve peace.

[1] I am as desirous of being a good neighbor as I am of being a bad subject. — THOREAU: Civil Disobedience [1849]

Speech at Chicago[1] [October 5, 1937]

War is a contagion.

Ibid.

History proves that dictatorships do not grow out of strong and successful governments, but out of weak and helpless ones. If by democratic methods people get a government strong enough to protect them from fear and starvation, their democracy succeeds; but if they do not, they grow impatient. Therefore, the only sure bulwark of continuing liberty is a government strong enough to protect the interests of the people, and a people strong enough and well enough informed to maintain its sovereign control over its government.

It is an unfortunate human failing that a full pocketbook often groans more loudly than an empty stomach.

Speech in Brooklyn [November 1, 1940]

We must be the great arsenal of democracy.

Fireside Chat [December 29, 1940]

In the future days, which we seek to make secure, we look forward to a world founded upon four essential human freedoms. The first is freedom of speech and expression — everywhere in the world. The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way — everywhere in the world. The third is freedom from want . . . everywhere in the world. The fourth is freedom from fear . . . anywhere in the world.

Message to Congress [January 6, 1941]

One great difference which has characterized this division [between liberal and conservative parties] has been that the liberal party — no matter what its particular name was at the time — believed in the wisdom and efficacy of the will of the great majority of the people, as distinguished from the judgment of a small minority. . . . The other great difference between the two parties has been this: The liberal party is a party which believes that, as new conditions and problems arise beyond the power of men and women to meet as individuals, it becomes the duty of the Government itself to find new remedies with which to meet them. The liberal party insists that the Government has the definite duty to use all its power and resources to meet new social problems with new social controls — to insure to the average person the right to his own economic and political life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

The Atlantic Charter

Eighth, they believe that all of the nations of the world, for realistic as well as spiritual reasons, must come to the abandonment of the use of force. Since no future peace can be maintained if land, sea or air armaments continue to be employed by nations which threaten, or may threaten, aggression outside of their frontiers, they believe, pending the establishment of a wider and permanent system of general security, that the disarmament of such nations is essential.

Statement to reporters, April 13, 1945, the day after his accession to the Presidency

The responsibility of the great states is to serve and not to dominate the world.

First Message to Congress, April 16, 1945

When Kansas and Colorado have a quarrel over the water in the Arkansas River they don't call out the National Guard in each State and go to war over it. They bring a suit in the Supreme Court of the United States and abide by the decision. There isn't a reason in the world why we cannot do that internationally.

Speech in Kansas City, April, 1945

Sixteen hours ago an American airplane dropped one bomb on Hiroshima. . . . It is a harnessing of the basic power of the universe. The force from which the sun draws its power has been loosed against those who brought war to the Far East.

First announcement of the atomic bomb, August 6, 1945

The release of atomic energy constitutes a new force too revolutionary to consider in the framework of old ideas.[1]

Message to Congress on atomic energy, October 3, 1945

Means of destruction hitherto unknown, against which there can be no adequate military defense, and in the employment of which no single nation can in fact have a monopoly.

Declaration on Atomic Energy by President Truman and Prime Ministers Clement Attlee and W. L. Mackenzie King at the White House, Washington, November 15, 1945

Effective, reciprocal, and enforceable safeguards acceptable to all nations.

We must embark on a bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of under-developed areas. More than half the people of the world are living in conditions approaching misery. Their food is inadequate. They are the victims of disease. Their economic life is primitive and stagnant. Their poverty is a handicap and a threat both to them and to more prosperous areas.

[1] At Magny's dinner. They said that Berthelot had predicted that in a hundred years of physical and chemical science man would learn to know the atom, and that with this knowledge he would be able, at his will, to dim, extinguish or relight the sun like a Carcel lamp. Claude Bernard, for his part, is said to have announced that with a hundred years more of physiological knowledge we would be able to make the organic law ourselves — to manufacture human life, in competition with the Creator.

For our part we did not raise any objection to all this talk, but we do believe that at that particular stage of scientific development, the good Lord, with a flowing white beard, will arrive on Earth with his chain of keys and will say to humanity, just as they do at the Art Gallery at five o'clock, "Gentlemen, it's closing time." Song

But there's wisdom in women, of more than they have known,
And thoughts go blowing through them, are wiser than their own.

There's Wisdom in Women

These I have loved:
White plates and cups, clean-gleaming . . .
The cool kindliness of sheets, that soon
Smooth away trouble; and the rough male kiss
Of blankets; grainy wood; live hair that is Shining and free; blue-massing clouds; the keen Unpassioned beauty of a great machine;
The benison of hot water; furs to touch,
The good smell of old clothes.

The Great Lover

If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is for ever England.

[1888–]

The Atomic Age began at exactly 5:30 Mountain War Time on the morning of July 16, 1945, on a stretch of semi-desert land about fifty airline miles from Alamogordo, New Mexico. At that great moment in history, ranking with the moment in the long ago when man first put fire to work for him and started on his march to civilization, the vast energy locked within the hearts of the atoms of matter was released for the first time in a burst of flame such as had never before been seen on this planet.[1]
In the New York Times, September 26, 1945

A great ball of fire about a mile in diameter, changing colors as it kept shooting upward, from deep purple to orange, expanding, growing bigger, rising as it was expanding, an elemental force freed from its bonds after being chained for billions of years.

The adventurer is within us, and he contests for our favour with the social man we are obliged to be. These two sorts of life are incompatibles; one we hanker after, the other we are obliged to. There is no other conflict so deep and bitter as this.

Twelve Against the Gods [1929]. Introduction

We, like the eagles, were born to be free. Yet we are obliged, in order to live at all, to make a cage of laws for ourselves and to stand on the perch. We are born as wasteful and unremorseful as tigers; we are obliged to be thrifty, or starve, or freeze. We are born to wander, and cursed to stay and dig.

St. Nicholas, in addition to protecting sailors, children, travellers, and merchants, is also the patron saint of pawnbrokers. The story goes that a nobleman of the saint's native town, Parara in Asia Minor, had lost all his money, and did not know how he could endow his three beautiful daughters. St. Nicholas, hearing of his trouble, went by night and flung through the window three bags of gold with which the nobleman was able to provide handsome dowries. These three bags are shown in all early ikons as three gold apples, and the gold apples of St. Nicholas are the origin of the pawnbroker's sign.[1]

Our Town [1938]

The dead don't stay interested in us living people for very long. Gradually, gradually, they let go hold of the earth . . . and the ambitions they had . . . and the pleasures they had . . . and the things they suffered . . . and the people they loved. They get weaned away from earth — that's the way I put it, weaned away.
Ibid.

That's what it was to be alive. To move about in a cloud of ignorance; to go up and down trampling on the feelings of those about you. To spend and waste time as though you had a million years. To be always at the mercy of one self-centered passion, or another. Now you know — that's the happy existence you wanted to go back to.

It is natural that women should like the birds whose domestic affairs can be observed under the eaves; they love the sweetest singers, the brightest plumage, the species not too shy to be seen at close range. For them the waders and swimmers, the awkward of leg, the harsh of cry, the wild of soul, have seldom the same appeal. But that which flees from men, that will men have. Women of all people ought to understand this, but they do not, quite.

The time to hear bird music is between four and six in the morning. Seven o'clock is not too late, but by eight the fine rapture is over, due, I suspect, to the contentment of the inner man that comes with breakfast; a poet should always be hungry or have a lost love.

Ibid.

Every novel which is truly written contributes to the total of knowledge which is there at the disposal of the next writer who comes, but the next writer must pay, always, a certain nominal percentage in experience to be able to understand and assimilate what is available as his birthright and what he must, in turn, take his departure from.

Easy writing makes hard reading.

Quoted in SAMUEL PUTNAM, Paris Was Our Mistress [1947]

The first and most important thing of all, at least for writers today, is to strip language clean, to lay it bare down to the bone.

Ibid.

All good books are alike in that they are truer than if they had really happened and after you are finished reading one you will feel that all that happened to you and afterwards it all belongs to you; the good and the bad, the ecstasy, the remorse and sorrow, the people and the places and how the weather was. If you can get so that you can give that to people, then you are a writer.

We (that's my ship and I) took off rather suddenly. We had a report somewhere around 4 o'clock in the afternoon before that the weather would be fine, so we thought we would try it.

Lindbergh's Own Story, in The New York Times, May 23, 1927

I saw a fleet of fishing boats. . . . I flew down almost touching the craft and yelled at them, asking if I was on the right road to Ireland.

They just stared. Maybe they didn't hear me. Maybe I didn't hear them. Or maybe they thought I was just a crazy fool. An hour later I saw land.

CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS

We, the peoples of the United Nations, determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal right of men and women and of nations large and small . . .

And for these ends to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors . . .

Have resolved to combine our efforts to accomplish these aims.

If you'll give me employ,
To plow and sow, and reap and mow,
And be a farmer's boy.

The Farmer's Boy [before 1689]. Stanza 2

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe.

Prophecy Attributed to Mother Shipton[1] [17th century]

Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.

Ibid.

Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, and talk;
In the air men shall be seen
In white, in black, and in green.

Ibid.

Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wooden boat.

Ibid.

A swarm of bees in May
Is worth a load of hay;
A swarm of bees in June
Is worth a silver spoon;
A swarm of bees in July
Is not worth a fly.

Old English saying

When poverty comes in at the door, love flies out the window.

Saying current since the 17th century

Please to remember the Fifth of November,
Gunpowder Treason and Plot.

Guy Fawkes's Rhyme, traditional in England since the 17th century

THE NEW ENGLAND PRIMER[1]

In Adam's fall
We sinned all.

My Book and Heart
Must never part.

Young Obadias,
David, Josias, —
All were pious.

Peter denyed
His Lord, and cryed.

Young Timothy
Learnt sin to fly.

Xerxes did die,
And so must I.

Zaccheus he Did climb the tree
Our Lord to see.

Our days begin with trouble here,
Our life is but a span,[2]
And cruel death is always near,
So frail a thing is man.

Now I lay me down to take my sleep,[3]
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take.

Sabina has a thousand charms
To captivate my heart;
Her lovely eyes are Cupid's arms,
And every look a dart:
But when the beauteous idiot speaks,
She cures me of my pain;
Her tongue the servile fetters breaks
And frees her slave again.

From Amphion Anglicus [1700]

[1] Most of the prophecies attributed to Mother Shipton — a witch and prophetess, according to tradition, who lived in Yorkshire in Tudor times — are fabrications of the seventeenth century and later.

[1] As early as 1691, Benjamin Harris of Boston advertised the forthcoming second impression of the the New England Primer. The oldest known copy extant is dated 1737.

[2] See Bacon, page 121b.

[3] The first record of this prayer is found in the Enchiridion Leonis [A. D. 1160]. The early editions of the Primer give the prayer as above. In the edition of 1784 the first line is altered to read, "Now I lay me down to sleep." In the edition of 1814 the second line reads, "I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep."

The Campbells are comin', oho, oho.
Song [Circa 1715]

The Girl I Left Behind Me.
Title of song [1759]

The United Voice of all His Majesty's free and loyal Subjects in America — Liberty and Property, and no Stamps.
Motto of various American colonial newspapers [1765–1766]

Yankee Doodle came to town
Upon a little pony,
He stuck a feather in his hat
And called it macaroni.
Yankee Doodle [1]

Yankee Doodle, keep it up,
Yankee Doodle dandy,
Mind the music and the step,
And with the girls be handy.
Ibid. Chorus

It's all in the day's work.
Saying current since the 18th century

Man may work from sun to sun,
But woman's work is never done.
Old saying

JUNIUS [2]

One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate and constitute law. What yesterday was fact, today is doctrine.
The Letters of Junius [1769–1771]. Dedication to the English Nation

The liberty of the press is the Palladium of all the civil, political, and religious rights of an Englishman.
Ibid.

These are the gloomy companions of a disturbed imagination; the melancholy madness of poetry, without the inspiration.
Ibid. VII, To Sir William Draper [March 3, 1769]

There are some hereditary strokes of character by which a family may be as clearly distinguished as by the blackest features of the human face.
Ibid. XII, To the Duke of Grafton [May 30, 1769]

I believe there is yet a spirit of resistance in this country, which will not submit to be oppressed; but I am sure there is a fund of good sense in this country, which cannot be deceived.
Ibid. XVI, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser (H. S. Woodfall) [July 19, 1769]

We owe it to our ancestors to preserve entire those rights, which they have delivered to our care: we owe it to our posterity, not to suffer their dearest inheritance to be destroyed.
Ibid. XX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [August 8, 1769]

When the constitution is openly invaded, when the first original right of the people, from which all laws derive their authority, is directly attacked, inferior grievances naturally lose their force, and are suffered to pass by without punishment or observation.
Ibid. XXX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 17, 1769]

There is a moment of difficulty and danger at which flattery and falsehood can no longer deceive, and simplicity itself can no longer be misled.

[1] This version was sufficiently popular in America in 1767 to be used in the ballad opera The Disappointment, or, The Force of Credulity [1767], by ANDREW BARTON.

Father and I went up to camp,
Along with Captain Goodwin;
And there we saw the men and boys,
As thick as hasty-pudding.

The origin of Yankee Doodle remains as mysterious as ever, unless it be deemed a positive result to have eliminated definitely every theory thus far advanced. — OSCAR GEORGE THEODORE SONNECK: Report on The Star-Spangled Banner, Hail Columbia, America, Yankee Doodle [1909]

[2] Pseudonym of the author of a series of letters that appeared in the Public Advertiser from 1769 to 1771, published in book form in 1772; they have been attributed, among others, to Sir Philip Francis, Lord Shelburne, Lord George Sackville, and Lord Temple.

The Letters of Junius. XXXV,[1] To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [December 19, 1769]

They [the Americans] equally detest the pageantry of a King, and the supercilious hypocrisy of a bishop.[2]

Ibid.

There is a holy mistaken zeal in politics as well as in religion. By persuading others, we convince ourselves.

Ibid.

The least considerable man among us has an interest equal to the proudest nobleman, in the laws and constitution of his country, and is equally called upon to make a generous contribution in support of them; — whether it be the heart to conceive, the understanding to direct, or the hand to execute.[3]

Ibid. XXXVII, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [March 19, 1770]

We lament the mistakes of a good man, and do not begin to detest him until he affects to renounce his principles.

Ibid. XLI, To Lord Mansfield [November 14, 1770]

The injustice done to an individual is sometimes of service to the public. Facts are apt to alarm us more than the most dangerous principles.

Ibid.

An honest man, like the true religion, appeals to the understanding, or modestly confides in the internal evidence of his conscience. The impostor employs force instead of argument, imposes silence where he cannot convince, and propagates his character by the sword.

Ibid.

If individuals have no virtues, their vices may be of use to us.

The Letters of Junius. LIX, To the Printer of the Public Advertiser [October 5, 1771]

The temple of fame is the shortest passage to riches and preferment.

Ibid.

Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God.[1]

Motto on Thomas Jefferson's Seal [Circa 1776]

Lost is our old simplicity of times,
The world abounds with laws, and teems with crimes.

On the Proceedings Against America.[2] Stanza 1

Our cargoes of meat, drink, and cloaths beat the Dutch.

Siege of Boston [1775]

There is nothing new except what is forgotten.

Attributed to Mademoiselle Bertin, milliner to Marie Antoinette [Circa 1785]

O Paddy dear, an' did ye hear the news that's goin' round?
The shamrock is by law forbid to grow on Irish ground!
No more St. Patrick's Day we'll keep, his colour can't be seen,
For there's a cruel law agin the wearin' o' the Green!

The Shan-von-Voght. Irish Song quoted in TRENCH: Realities of Irish Life

For they're hangin' men an' women there for wearin' o' the Green.

Christmas is coming, the geese are getting fat,
Please to put a penny in the old man's hat;
If you haven't got a penny, a ha'penny will do,

The woods are full of them.
Quoted by ALEXANDER WILSON: American Ornithology [1808]. Preface

The cunning seldom gain their ends;
The wise are never without friends.
The Fox and the Hen, Moral[1]

A fox went out in a hungry plight
And he begged of the moon to give him light,
For he'd many miles to go that night
Before he could reach his den-O.
The Gray Goose. Stanza 1

One night when the wind it blew cold,
Blew bitter across the wild moor,
Young Mary she came with her child, Wandering home to her own father's door.
Mary of the Wild Moor.[2] Stanza 1

Oh, the praties they are small —
Over here, over here.
Oh, the praties they are small
When we dig 'em in the fall,
And we eat 'em, coats and all,
Full of fear, full of fear.
Irish Famine Song [1846–1847]

Oh, ye'll tak' the high road an' I'll tak'
the low road,
An' I'll be in Scotland bafore ye;
But I and my true love will never meet again,
On the bonnie, bonnie banks o' Loch Lomond.
Scottish Song, Loch Lomond. Refrain

So I said, "Old man, for whom digg'st thou this grave
In the heart of London town?"
And the deep-toned voice of the digger replied —
"We're laying a gas-pipe down!"
From the Sublime to the Ridiculous.[1] Stanza 3

Went out to milk and I didn't know how,
I milked the goat instead of the cow;
A monkey sittin' on a pile of straw
A-winkin' at his mother-in-law.
Turkey in the straw, turkey in the hay,
Roll 'em up and twist 'em up a high tuckahaw,
And hit 'em up a tune called Turkey in the Straw.
Turkey in the Straw.[2] Stanza 1 and refrain

Sugar in the gourd and honey in the

They will find the streets are guarded by
The United States Marines.
Ibid. Stanza 4

There is a tavern in the town,
And there my true love sits him down,
And drinks his wine with laughter and with glee,
And never, never thinks of me.
There Is a Tavern in the Town. Stanza 1

Fare thee well for I must leave thee,
Do not let this parting grieve thee,
But remember that the best of friends must part.
Ibid. Refrain

Adieu, adieu, kind friends, adieu, adieu, adieu,
I can no longer stay with you.
I'll hang my harp on a weeping willow-tree,[1]
And may the world go well with thee.
Ibid. Stanza 2

Mr. Finney had a turnip,
And it grew behind the barn,
And it grew, and it grew,
And the turnip did no harm.
Mr. Finney's Turnip.[2] Stanza 1

[1] Traditional ballad; there are innumerable versions and verses.

[2] The weasel was a hatter's tool, and "pop" was a term meaning to pawn or "hock." The Eagle was a music hall in the City Road. The song is attributed to W. R. MANDALE.

[3] Another traditional version, repudiated by New Bedford authority, is that the skipper said: "All I want out of you is silence, and damn little of that."

[1] See Psalm CXXXVII, 2, on page 1038a.

[2] Often attributed to Longfellow, who denied the authorship in a letter to George Anderson, July 11, 1881.

Of all the funny things that live, in woodland, marsh, or bog,
That creep the ground or fly the air, the funniest thing's a frog.

The Scientific Frog [Circa 1865]. Stanza 1

I belong to that highly respectable tribe
Which is known as the Shabby Genteel . . .
Too proud to beg, too honest to steal.

The Shabby Genteel (Sung by Sol Smith Russell [1848–1901] in A Poor Relation)

If any lift of mine may ease

And quite unaccustomed to fear,
But the bravest by far in the ranks of the Shah
Was Abdul the Bulbul Amir.

Abdul the Bulbul Amir. Stanza 1

Now the heroes were plenty and well known to fame
In the troops that were led by the Czar,
And the bravest of these was a man by the name
Of Ivan Petruski Skavar.

Ibid. Stanza 3

I'm Terence O'Reilly, I'm a man of renown . . .
If they'd let me be, I'd have Ireland free,
On the railroads you'd not pay any fare,
I'd have the United States under my thumb,
And I'd sleep in the President's chair.

Is That Mr. Reilly?[1] [1882]. Stanza 1

Is that Mr. Reilly, can anyone tell?
Is that Mr. Reilly that owns the hotel?
Well, if that's Mr. Reilly, they speak of so highly,
Upon me soul, Reilly, you're doin' quite well.

Is That Mr. Reilly? Chorus

Sow a Thought, and you reap an Act;
Sow an Act, and you reap a Habit;
Sow a Habit, and you reap a Character;
Sow a Character, and you reap a Destiny.

Immaturus obi: sed tu felicior annos
Vive meos, Bona Respublica! Vive tuos.
(I died young; but thou, O Good Republic, Live out my years for me with better fortune.)
Inscription, perhaps chosen by Thomas Jefferson, on the tomb of Meriwether Lewis [1774–1809], explorer of the Lewis and Clark expedition

Here lies Sir Jenkin Grout, who loved his friend, and persuaded his enemy: what his mouth ate, his hand paid for: what his servants robbed, he restored: if a woman gave him pleasure, he supported her in pain: he never forgot his children: and whoso touched his finger, drew after it his whole body.
Quoted by Ralph Waldo Emerson in his essay, Manners [1856]

This is the grave of Mike O'Day
Who died maintaining his right of way.
His right was clear, his will was strong,
But he's just as dead as if he'd been wrong.

General Prologue

THE KING JAMES VERSION [1]
[1611]

OLD TESTAMENT

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

Genesis. I, 1

And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

Ibid. 2

And God said, Let there be light; and there was light.

Ibid. 3

And the evening and the morning were the first day.

Ibid. 5

And God saw that it was good.

Ibid. 10

And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness.

Ibid. 26

Male and female created he them.

Ibid. 27

Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth.

Genesis. I, 28

And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.

Ibid. II, 7

And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden.

Ibid. 8

The tree of life also in the midst of the garden.

Ibid. 9

But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

Ibid. 17

It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him.

Ibid. 18

And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof.

Ibid. 21

And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman.

Ibid. 22

Bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh.

Ibid. 23

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh.

Ibid. 24

Now the serpent was more subtile than any beast of the field.

Ibid. III, 1

Your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

---

[1] Among all our joys, there was no one that more filled our hearts, than the blessed continuance of the preaching of God's sacred Word among us; which is that inestimable treasure, which excelleth all the riches of the earth; because the fruit thereof extendeth itself, not only to the time spent in this transitory world, but directeth and disposeth men unto that eternal happiness which is above in heaven. — The Translators' Dedication to James I

And they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons.

Genesis. III, 7

And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day.

Ibid. 8

The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

Ibid. 12

What is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat.

Ibid. 13

In sorrow thou shalt bring forth children.

Ibid. 16

In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

Ibid. 19

And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living.

Ibid. 20

So he drove out the man: and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

Ibid. 24

And Abel was a keeper of sheep, but Cain was a tiller of the ground.

Ibid. IV, 2

Am I my brother's keeper?

Ibid. 9

The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground.

Ibid. 10

A fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

Ibid. 12

My punishment is greater than I can bear.

Ibid. 13

And the Lord set a mark upon Cain.

Ibid. 15

And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the land of Nod.

Genesis. IV, 16

The father of such as dwell in tents.

Ibid. 20

Jubal: he was the father of all such as handle the harp and organ.

Ibid. 21

And Enoch walked with God.

Ibid. V, 24

And all the days of Methuselah were nine hundred sixty and nine years.

Ibid. 27

And Noah begat Shem, Ham, and Japheth.

Ibid. 32

There were giants in the earth in those days.

Ibid. VI, 4

Mighty men which were of old, men of renown.

Ibid.

Make thee an ark of gopher wood.

Ibid. 14

And of every living thing of all flesh, two of every sort shalt thou bring into the ark.

Ibid. 19

And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

Ibid. VII, 12

But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot.

Ibid. VIII, 9

And lo, in her mouth was an olive leaf plucked off.

Ibid. 11

For the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth.

Ibid. 21

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease.

Ibid. 22

I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.

Ibid. IX, 13

Even as Nimrod the mighty hunter before the Lord.

Genesis. X, 9

Babel; because the Lord did there confound the language of all the earth.

Ibid. XI, 9

Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee . . . for we be brethren.

Ibid. XIII, 8

In a good old age.

Ibid. XV, 15

His [Ishmael's] hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him.

Ibid. XVI, 12

Thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee.

Ibid. XVII, 5

My Lord, if now I have found favour in thy sight, pass not away, I pray thee, from thy servant.

Ibid. XVIII, 3

But his [Lot's] wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt.

Ibid. XIX, 26

My son, God will provide himself a lamb for a burnt offering.

Ibid. XXII, 8

And he [Esau] sold his birthright unto Jacob.

Ibid. XXV, 33

The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

Ibid. XXVII, 22

Thy brother came with subtilty, and hath taken away thy blessing.

Ibid. 35

He [Jacob] dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it.

Ibid. XXVIII, 12

Surely the Lord is in this place; and I knew it not.

Ibid. 16

This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

Ibid. 17

Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her.

Genesis. XXIX, 20

Mizpah; for he said, The Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent one from another.

Ibid. XXXI, 49

I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.

Ibid. XXXII, 26

For I have seen God face to face, and my life is preserved.

Ibid. 30

Behold, this dreamer cometh.

Ibid. XXXVII, 19

They stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours.

Ibid. 23

And the lean and the ill-favoured kine did eat up the first seven fat kine.

Ibid. XLI, 20

There come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt: And there shall arise after them seven years of famine.

Ibid. 29, 30

Ye shall bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.

Ibid. XLIV, 29

And ye shall eat the fat of the land.

Ibid. XLV, 18

Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel.

Ibid. XLIX, 4

Unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills.

Ibid. 26

She took for him an ark of bulrushes, and daubed it with slime and with pitch.

Exodus. II, 3

I have been a stranger in a strange land.

Ibid. 22

Behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed.

Ibid. III, 2

Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground.

Ibid. 5

A land flowing with milk and honey.[1]

Exodus. III, 8

And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM.

Ibid. 14

I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue.

Ibid. IV, 10

Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick.

Ibid. V, 7

And he hardened Pharaoh's heart.

Ibid. VII, 13.

Let my people go.

Ibid. 16

Darkness which may be felt.

Ibid. X, 21

Your lamb shall be without blemish.

Ibid. XII, 5

And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste: it is the Lord's passover.

Ibid. 11

For I will pass through the land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, both man and beast; and against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the Lord.

Ibid. 12

This day [Passover] shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord throughout your generations.

Ibid. 14

Seven days shall ye eat unleavened bread.

Ibid. 15

There was a great cry in Egypt: for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

Ibid. 30

Remember this day, in which ye came out from Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

Ibid. XIII, 3

And the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire.

Exodus. XIII, 21

And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea; and the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

Ibid. XIV, 21

I will sing unto the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously: the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

Ibid. XV, 1

The Lord is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation.

Ibid. 2

The Lord is a man of war.

Ibid. 3

Thou sentest forth thy wrath, which consumed them as stubble.

Ibid. 7

Would to God we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the fleshpots, and when we did eat bread to the full.

Ibid. XVI, 3

It is manna.

Ibid. 15

Thou shalt have no other gods before me.

Ibid. XX, 2

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image.

Ibid. 4

For I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me.

Ibid. 5

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.

Ibid. 7

Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.

Ibid. 8

Six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work;

But the seventh day . . . thou shalt not do any work.

Ibid. 9, 10

[1] Also in XXXIII, 3, and Jeremiah, XI, 5.

Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Exodus. XX, 12

Thou shalt not kill
Thou shalt not commit adultery.
Thou shalt not steal.
Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.
Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's.

Ibid. 13–17

But let not God speak with us, lest we die.

Ibid. 19

He that smiteth a man, so that he die, shall be surely put to death.

XXI. 12

Eye for eye, tooth for tooth,[1] hand for hand, foot for foot.

Ibid. 24

Behold, I send an Angel before thee, to keep thee in the way.

Ibid. XXIII, 20

Thou art a stiffnecked people.

Ibid. XXXIII, 3

Thou canst not see my face: for there shall no man see me, and live.

Ibid. 20

And he [Moses] was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights; he did neither eat bread, nor drink water. And he wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant, the ten commandments.

Ibid. XXXIV, 28

The swine . . . is unclean to you. Of their flesh shall ye not eat.

Leviticus. XI, 7, 8

As a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.

Ibid. 5

And there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

Ibid. 6

The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.

Ibid. 9

More to be desired are they than gold.

Ibid. 10

Sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.

Ibid.

Cleanse thou me from secret faults.

Ibid. 12

Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight.

Ibid. 14

My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? [1]

Ibid. XXII, 1

I may tell all my bones: they look and stare upon me.

Ibid. 17

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

Ibid. XXIII, 1

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters.

Ibid. 2

He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

Ibid. 3

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Ibid. 4

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Psalms. XXIII, 5

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

Ibid. 6

The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.

Ibid. XXIV, 1

For he hath founded it upon the seas, and established it upon the floods.

Ibid. 2

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place?

Ibid. 3

He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.

Ibid. 4

Who is this King of glory? The Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory.

Ibid. 10

The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?

Ibid. XXVII, 1

The Lord is my strength and my shield.

Ibid. XXVIII, 7

Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness.

Ibid. XXIX, 2

The voice of the Lord is upon the waters: the God of glory thundereth: the Lord is upon many waters.

Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life.

Ibid. 23

For the lips of a strange woman drop as a honeycomb, and her mouth is smoother than oil:

But her end is bitter as wormwood, sharp as a two-edged sword.

Ibid. V, 3, 4

Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise:

Which having no guide, overseer, or ruler,

Provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest.

Ibid. VI, 6–8

Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep.

Ibid. 10; XXIV, 33

Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?

Ibid. 27

Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned?

Ibid. 28

He goeth after her straightway, as an ox goeth to the slaughter.

Ibid. VII, 22

Wisdom is better than rubies.

Ibid. VIII, 11

I love them that love me; and those that seek me early shall find me.

Ibid. 17

Wisdom hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars.

Ibid. IX, 1

A soft answer turneth away wrath.

Ibid. XV, 1

A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance.

Ibid. 13

He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast.

Ibid. 15

Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.

Ibid. 17

A word spoken in due season, how good is it!

Ibid. 23

Before honour is humility.

Ibid. 33; XVIII, 12

A man's heart deviseth his way; but the Lord directeth his steps.

Ibid. XVI, 9

Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall.

Ibid. 18

The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness.

Ibid. 31

He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.

Ibid. 32

Whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker.

What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the sun?

Ibid. 3

One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever.

Ibid. 4

All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full.

Ibid. 7

The eye is not satisfied with seeing, nor the ear filled with hearing.

Ibid. 8

There is no new thing under the sun.

Ibid. 9

Is there anything whereof it may be said, See, this is new? It hath been already of old time, which was before us.

Ibid. 10

I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and, behold, all is vanity and vexation of spirit.

Ibid. 14

In much wisdom is much grief: and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow.

Ibid. 18

Wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness.

Ibid. II, 13

The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness.

Ibid. 14

One event happeneth to them all.

Ibid

How dieth the wise man? as the fool.

Ibid. 16

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven.

Ecclesiastes. III, 1

A time to be born, and a time to die.

Ibid. 2

A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance.

Ibid. 4

A time to keep silence, and a time to speak.

Ibid. 7

Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead, more than the living which are yet alive.

Ibid. IV, 2

Woe to him that is alone when he falleth.

Ibid. 10

A threefold cord is not quickly broken.

Ibid. 12

God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few.

Ibid. V, 2

Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that thou shouldest vow and not pay.

Ibid. 5

The sleep of a labouring man is sweet.

Ibid. 12

But the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

Ibid.

A good name is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth.

Ibid. VII, 1

It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting.

Ibid. 2

Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.

Ibid. 3

As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool.

Ibid. 6

Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof.

Ibid. 8

In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider.

Ecclesiastes. VII, 14

Be not righteous over much.

Ibid. 16

There is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not.

Ibid. 20

One man among a thousand have I found; but a woman among all those have I not found.

Ibid. 28

God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions.

Ibid. 29

There is no discharge in that war.

Ibid. VIII, 8

A man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry.[1]

Ibid. 15

All things come alike to all: there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked.

Ibid. IX, 2

A living dog is better than a dead lion.

Ibid. 4

The living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten.

Ibid. 5

Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

Ibid. 10

The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong.

Ibid. 11

He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it; and whoso breaketh an hedge, a serpent shall bite him.

Ibid. X, 8

A feast is made for laughter, and wine maketh merry: but money answereth all things.

Ibid. 19

A bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter.

Ecclesiastes. X, 20

Cast thy bread upon the waters: for thou shalt find it after many days.

Ibid. XI, 1

He that observeth the wind shall not sow; and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap.

Ibid. 4

In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand.

Ibid. 6

Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth

Ibid. 9

Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them.

Ibid. XII, 1

While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened, nor the clouds return after the rain.

Ibid. 2

In the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves, and the grinders cease because they are few, and those that look out of the windows be darkened.

Ibid. 3

The doors shall be shut in the streets, when the sound of the grinding is low, and he shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall be brought low.

Ibid. 4

The almond tree shall flourish, and the grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail; because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets.

Ibid. 5

Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern.

[1] Also in Luke, XII, 19.

Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

Ecclesiastes. XII, 7

The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies.

Ibid. 11

Of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh.

Ibid. 12

Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man.

Ibid. 13

For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

Ibid. 14

The song of songs, which is Solomon's.

The Song of Solomon. I, 1

I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

Ibid. 5

O thou fairest among women.

Ibid. 8

I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys.

Ibid. II, 1

His banner over me was love.

Ibid. 4

Stay me with flagons, comfort me with apples: for I am sick of love.

Ibid. 5

Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away.

For, lo! the winter is past, the rain is over and gone;

The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.

Ibid. 10–12

The little foxes, that spoil the vines.

Ibid. 15

Until the day break, and the shadows flee away.

The Song of Solomon. II, 17; IV, 6

By night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not.

Ibid. III, 1

Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lilies.

Ibid. IV, 5

Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee.

Ibid. 7

Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south; blow upon my garden, that the spices thereof may flow out. Let my beloved come into his garden, and eat his pleasant fruits.

Ibid. 16

My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door, and my bowels were moved for him.

Ibid. V, 4

His mouth is most sweet: yea, he is altogether lovely. This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem.

Ibid. 16

Who is she that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?

Ibid. VI, 10

Thy belly is like a heap of wheat set about with lilies.

Ibid. VII, 2

Thy neck is as a tower of ivory.

Ibid. 4

Like the best wine . . . that goeth down sweetly, causing the lips of those that are asleep to speak.

Ibid. 9

Set me as a seal upon thine heart, as a seal upon thine arm: for love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave.

Ibid. VIII, 6

Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it.

Ibid. 7

We have a little sister, and she hath no breasts.

The Song of Solomon. VIII, 8

Make haste, my beloved, and be thou like to a roe or to a young hart upon the mountains of spices.

Ibid. 14

The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib.

Isaiah. I, 3

The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint.

Ibid. 5

As a lodge in a garden of cucumbers.

Ibid. 8

Bring no more vain oblations.

Ibid. 13

Come now, and let us reason together.

Ibid. 18

Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow.

Ibid.

They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.[1]

Ibid. II, 4

In that day a man shall cast his idols . . . to the moles and to the bats.

Ibid. 20

Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils.

Ibid. 22

The stay and the staff, the whole stay of bread, and the whole stay of water.

Ibid. III, 1

Grind the faces of the poor.

Ibid. 15

Walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet.

Ibid. 16

In that day seven women shall take hold of one man.

Ibid. IV, 1

Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink.

Isaiah. V, 11

Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope.

Ibid. 18

Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil.

Ibid. 20

I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple.

Ibid. VI, 1

Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory.

Ibid. 3

Then, said I, Lord, how long?

Ibid. 11

Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel.

Ibid. VII, 14

For a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence.

Ibid. VIII, 14

The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined.

Ibid. IX, 2

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

Ibid. 6

The ancient and honourable.

Ibid. 15

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots:

And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord.

[1] Also in Joel, III, 10 and Micah, IV, 3.

The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid.

Isaiah. XI, 6

How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning!

I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place.

Ibid. 23

Whose merchants are princes.

Ibid. XXIII, 8

A feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees.

Ibid. XXV, 6

He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces.

Ibid. 8

Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee.

Ibid. XXVI, 3

Hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast.

Ibid. 20

Leviathan, that crooked serpent . . . the dragon that is in the sea.

Ibid. XXVII, 1

For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little.

Ibid. XXVIII, 10

We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement.

Ibid. 15

It shall be a vexation only to understand the report.

Isaiah. XXVIII, 19

They are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink.

Ibid. XXIX, 9

Their strength is to sit still.

Ibid. XXX, 7

Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever.

Ibid. 8

The bread of adversity, and the water of affliction.

Ibid. 20

This is the way, walk ye in it.

Ibid. 21

And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

Ibid. XXXII, 2

The desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose.

Ibid. XXXV, 1

Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.

The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God.[1]

Isaiah. XL, 3

Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low: and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places plain.

Ibid. 4

All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field.

Ibid. 6

The grass withereth, the flower fadeth:[2] but the word of our God shall stand for ever.

Ibid. 8

He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young.

Ibid. 11

The nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as the small dust of the balance.

Ibid. 15

Have ye not known? have ye not heard? hath it not been told you from the beginning?

Ibid. 21

They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.

Ibid. 31

They helped every one his neighbour: and every one said to his brother, Be of good courage.

Ibid. XLI, 6

A bruised reed shall he not break, and the smoking flax shall he not quench.

Ibid. XLII, 3

There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked.

Ibid. XLVIII, 22

Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb?

God, in whom we live and move and have our being.

Family Prayer. Morning

O Lord, support us all the day long, until the shadows lengthen and the evening comes, and the busy world is hushed, and the fever of life is over, and our work is done. Then in thy mercy grant us a safe lodging, and a holy rest, and peace at the last.[1]

Ibid. At Night

BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER, ENGLISH

Grant that the old Adam in these persons may be so buried, that the new man may be raised up in them.

Holy Baptism. Of Those of Riper Years

With all my worldly goods I thee endow.

Solemnization of Matrimony

[1] This is derived from a Latin antiphon, said to have been composed by Notker, a monk of St. Gall, in 911, while watching some workmen building a bridge at Martinsbrücke, in peril of their lives. It forms the groundwork of Luther's antiphon De Morte.

THE KORAN

Translated [1734] by George Sale [1697–1736]

Turn, therefore, thy face towards the holy temple of Mecca; and wherever ye be, turn your faces towards that place.

Chap. 2

Wherever ye be, God will bring you all back at the resurrection.

Ibid.

As for him who voluntarily performeth a good work, verily God is grateful and knowing.

Ibid.

Your God is one God; there is no God but He, the most merciful.

Ibid.

O true believers, take your necessary precautions against your enemies, and either go forth to war in separate parties, or go forth all together in a body.

Chap. 4

Fight for the religion of God.

Ibid

O men, respect women who have borne you.

Ibid.

Wheresoever ye be, death will overtake you, although ye be in lofty towers.

Ibid.

Whosoever flieth from his country for the sake of God's true religion, shall find in the earth many forced to do the same, and plenty of provisions.

Ibid.

God loveth not the speaking ill of any one in public.

Chap. 4

Let not thy hand be tied up to thy neck; neither open it with an unbounded expansion, lest thou become worthy of reprehension, and be reduced to poverty.

Chap. 17

Of his mercy he hath made for you the night and the day, that ye may rest in the one, and may seek to obtain provision for yourself of his abundance, by your industry, in the other.

Chap. 28

If God should punish men according to what they deserve, he would not leave on the back of the earth so much as a beast.

Chap. 35

God obligeth no man to more than he hath given him ability to perform.

Chap. 65

Woe be unto those who pray, and who are negligent at their prayer: who play the hypocrites, and deny necessaries to the needy.

Chap. 107

O unbelievers, I will not worship that which ye worship; nor will ye worship that which I worship. . . . Ye have your religion, and I my religion.

Chap. 109

  I am touching a butterfly, 971b iridescent, 661b life is a, in the night, 823b life is an empty, 309a life is but an empty, 520b like a hideous, 167a lives on, 978a love's young, 439a
  new-risen from a, 130b
  O beautiful for patriot, 781b occupy age with the, 572b of a shadow, 13b
  of a waking man, 71a
  of battled fields no more, 415a of it by day and night, 860b of Jeanie with the light brown hair, 636a of life, 468a
  of loveliness descending, 631a of not to find, 967b of not to tell, 420b of sleeping innocence, 649a of the devil, 451b old men, dreams, 277a old men shall, dreams, 1049a old men's, 277a
  one man with a, 730a

  republic is a, 898b scraps of, 795a shadow of a, 479a shall be a noonday light, 587b shape of his, 772a
  she did but, of heaven, 279b short as any, 141a
  silently as a, 365a sleep not, not, 591b
  so dark as sages say, 586b somnambulist of a vanished, 497a stirr'd with her, 458b sweet thoughts in a, 466b sweet, when the long trick's over, 896a that comes with first sleep, 376b that his faith is fast, 519a that I forget, 693b that is dying, 730a
  the bonds were brittle, 693a them all day long, 598a they, of home, 865a
  those who, by day, 544a thrives upon the happiest, 629a unseen unsought, 907a vision or a waking, 482a
  we might be all we, 465b
  what I do and, include thee, 519a
  what my, was, 142b
  which was not all a dream, 456b whom a, hath possessed, 937a within a dream, 543b
  youthful poets, 245b
Dream-beguiled, paths are, 795a Dreamed I went to the city of gold, 839a of cheese, 750a
  of literary fame, 513b that life was beauty, 587b though right were worsted, 575b
Dreamer, back of the job the, 915b beautiful, wake unto me, 636b behold this, cometh, 1023b of dreams, 666b
Dreamers of dreams, 730a, 1025b soldiers are, 937a
Dreamful ease, dark death or, 547b
Dreaming darkly of a Dun, 651a eyes of wonder, 657b dreams no mortal ever dared, 545a lost in, 486b nights, chill thy, 480a o'er the joys of night, 386a on things to come, 206b past the size of, 201b doubtful, of dreams, 693b dreamer of, 666b, 1025b

  dreamers of, 730a
  England of our, 819a feed on, 13a
  from our pleasant, awake, 449b full of ghastly, 127b glimpses of forgotten, 546b glorious, that fooled me, 606b have only my, 825b hopes the, the pleasures, 586b hunters of, 777b
  hunts in, 548b
  in, begin responsibilities, 996b in, doth he behold her, 725b in, she grows not older, 725b land of my, 952a lies down to pleasant, 470b like a land of, 622a measure days by, 810b mother tells me happy, 747b no mortal dared to dream, 545a not with, but with blood, 696a of avarice, 342b
  of men, 772b
  of possessing heart, 855b of those who wake, 52b old men shall dream, 277a, 1049a pleasing, and slumbers light, 415a saddle your, 915a
  sigh'd for Agnes', 480b slaves to, 949b
  somnambulisms reveries, 604b until my, all come true, 952a untold, house of, 796a wave before half-shut eye, 328b

  what, may come, 174b
Dreams, wingèd, 1011b
Dreamt I dwelt in marble halls, 483b of in your philosophy, 173a
  such music was possible, 665a
Dreamy eyes, 439b
Drear, down the vast edges, 622a
  November's sky chill and, 414a
Drear-nighted December, 478a
Dreary dumps, 129b morals make you, 753a never-ending tale, 753b void, rapture to the, 455a world is sad and, 636a
Dredth, burnt child fire, 93b
Dregs of life, 276a winter's made desolate, 705b
Dreme of joye, 999a
Drenched and dripping apple-trees, 961b in fraternal blood, 443b

  to, to call to dine, 781a
Dress'd fine as I will, 302b in all his trim, 206b nature to advantage, 310b Dressed and sauced and seasoned, 92a up with nowhere to go, 843a washed, warmed and fed, 896a when he's well, 577b wife, herself, 285b woman who knew she was well, 727b
Dresser, swollen, drawer, 841a
Dresses for breakfasts and dinners and balls, 632b for winter spring summer and fall, 632b in which to do nothing at all, 632b to dance in and flirt in and talk in, 632b to sit in and stand in and walk in, 632b Drest in a little brief authority, 184b in humility, 151a still to be, 218b
  world you are beautifully, 626b
Drew a circle that shut me out, 756a all manner of things, 657a an angel down, 280b Creator, his spirit, 281a
  dial from his poke, 160b in the common air, 49b, 1065b iron tears, 246a
  lifelike portrait, 339a
  my soul, back, 232b
  one angel, 571b
  Priam's curtain, 152a

Drew, quick-eyed love, nearer, 232b these tides of men, 946a with one long kiss, 123b
Dried plants, books of, 558a tubes are twisted and, 814b Drift, adamant for, 868b along with current's flow, 910a beyond his love and care, 528a go with the, of things, 879a know your, 157b long years, 38b of pinions, 790b
  tell you my, 157b to and fro, 796b wait and obey, 822a
Drifted an hedonist, 933a hours that have, by, 717b
  white and, snow, 498b
Drifting down the big still river, 676b dust, Helen's lips are, 844b
Drifts away like the waters, 825b dank yellow, of leaves, 623a
Drift-wood bleached and dry, 674a Drill, Birken'ead, 818b puts away the, 957a
  ye tarriers, 686b
Drink a cup to Scotland, 489b a little in, 301b
  ale's the stuff to, 786b and the devil, 750a angel of the darker, 532a as he brews so shall he, 218a as I, 326b
  by daylight, 909b can rise alone and, more, 449b come my lad, some beer, 338a dance and, and sing, 387a deep or taste not, 310b divine, 219a dogs, at the river Nile, 48b easy meat and, 817a eat and, as friends, 130a eat, and be merry, 1043a, 1057a every creature, but I, 267b every one that lives must, 690a felony to, small beer, 125b first the man takes a, 712b five reasons we should, 288b follow strong, 1045a for the thirsty, 109b for your lips to, 692b from the well, 635b
  gapes for, again, 267a give him water to, 1041a give me to, mandragora, 200a give strong, 1041b has been arranged, 957a health to the wonders, 856b hero must, brandy, 342a
  if he thirst give him, 1060a in our comrades' eyes, 627b into my eyes the shine, 961b
  it down, 686a
  it up, 1016b
  it with pleasure, 1066a
  let us, and be merry, 262b let us eat and, 1046a little more than enough to, 788a live that they may eat and, 60b man takes his first, 801a meat, and cloaths, 1002b meat, and cloth, 90a moderate pleasant food and, 282b more fine than mine host's, 482b
Drink, never refuse, after dark, 909b never taste who always, 219b no longer water, 1063a no more than a sponge, 88a no sperit, 601a
  nor any drop to, 421b not the third glass, 232b not to elevation, 332a oblivion of a day, 638b old wine best to, 119a one man's poison is another's, 34b one, of wine, 963b
  out of my own, 163a pawn intelligence to buy a, 968b pretty creature, 406a provokes the desire, 196b sit down and, with me, 688a stagger but not with strong, 1046b strong, is raging, 1040a strong or not at all, 1014a sweetest, be cup of sorrow, 857a taken to, 847a takes a drink, 712b takes the man, 712b taste any, once, 900a
  the poppies of Cathay, 528a thirsty and ye gave me, 1054b to her that each loves best, 433a to me only with thine eyes, 219a to the general joy, 197b to the lass, 382a
  today drown all sorrow, 225a victuals and, 23a water of gall to, 1048a what to, and wear, 492a what wine he liked to, 72a when and what he pleaseth, 92b while you live, 532a wild anarchy of, 219b will not, with you, 144a with him that wears a hood, 97a with me, 326b women, or snuff, 972b ye all of it, 1055a
  your ale, 787a
Drinke, cannot make him, 92b
Drinkest tears of children, 449a
Drinking a quart of milk, 948a and Sabbath-breaking, 449b cursed him in, 451b die, in an inn, 74b examined after, 18b fresh with constant, 267a gently, up the dew, 687b
  I'm for, honestly, 896b jesting dancing, 786a kept on, 846b largely sobers us again, 310b laughing quaffing time, 280b leaving, of wine, 284a mad with, 774a much, little thinking, 295a my griefs, 140a not the, but excess, 227a
  now's the time for, 38b poor and unhappy brains for, 187b rule for, 300b
  the blude-red wine, 1011a thirsteth still, 649b very merry dancing, 280b
  what's, 460b
Drinks and gapes for drink again, 267a his wine with laughter, 1004b long time between, 752b side so low she, water, 117b two, and you strut, 963a
  when he is not thirsty, 1006b
Drink-shops, strolling among the, 66a
Drip huge drops on your neck, 959a slow, the seconds, 992b Dripping apple-trees, 961b came up, 923a their snow, 946b
  with coolness, 450a
Drips, heavenly love that, 745b
Drive a coach and six, 1007a enemy beyond the frontier, 399b me down the slopes of hell, 891a nature out, 972b
  nyght away, 77b
  one heat, out another, 117a out nature with a fork, 41a
  the hearts of men, 37a Driven, better bargain, 116a by their weakness to noise, 59b snow, whiter than the, 347a Drives, as dust that, 741b fat oxen, 343a her ploughshare o'er creation, 306a horses of the sun, 738a
